Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

THERE are two measures coming up for vote November 7 which provide state aid for returning veterans of World War II. Both measures were referred to the people by the legislature, and both were drawn and so referred before the GI bill of rights, aimed in part at the same objectives, was enacted by congress.

EPLEY

Problem of the voter is to determine whether the state should undertake these projects, in view of the congressional enactment. Without the latter, there would be no doubt that we should go ahead.

First of the veterans' aid measures is an amendment which authorizes establishment of an "Oregon War Veterans Fund" for the provision of loans to Oregon veterans to buy homes and farms. Bonds up to about $30,000,000 may be issued under this plan. The amounts of the loans, rate of interest, and other details, would have to be provided in a subsequent legislative act. The amendment provides for an annual levy of two mills on all real property in the state for servicing the bonds.

The GI bill of rights provides guarantees of 50 per cent of loans up to $2000 guarantee ($4000 total loan) for veterans for purchase of homes, businesses and equipment. The veteran under this act is relieved of paying interest on the guaranteed portion of his loan for the first year.

The American Legion, which has taken an active interest in this measure, holds that the GI bill of rights does not obviate the need for the state amendment.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that veterans should have no difficulty in getting favorable loans under the GI bill, in view of the federal guarantee, and in view of the generous supply of money for lending now available from banks, loan associations and other agencies.

Oregon undertook a similar program after the last war. The results were not entirely satisfactory, although the state has come out fairly well since the reflation of property values under present conditions. The old law had a cash bonus feature that does not appear in this measure.

Educational Aid

THE other veterans' measure is one to provide state educational aid to veterans in public or private schools in Oregon, the aid to consist of $75 for the first month, and $50 for the next ensuing eight months, and $35 a month for nine months in the ensuing three years. To take care of the cost, a tax of two-tenths of a mill is provided.

The GI bill of rights also has an educational feature. Under the federal act, the government will provide tuition and regular fees of the school selected by the veteran, provide books and supplies and travel, and furnish subsistence allowance of $50 a month to a single veteran and $75 a month to one with dependents. Whereas state aid is offered up to four years, the federal bill is limited to one year of schooling for each year of service, to a maximum of four years.

In most respects, the federal program appears to be more liberal. Veterans using the federal assistance would be barred from accepting the state educational aid plan.

Again, the Legion and other proponents of this measure think it is advisable to adopt the state plan along with the federal enactment.

The state unquestionably has a responsibility to assist its returned fighting men and women in every feasible way not properly taken care of by federal law, although in some fields certainly it would seem to be the federal government's prime responsibility. We think all voters should consider the two programs carefully to be certain that proper provision is made, and to vote accordingly.

We are handicapped in reaching final conclusions because not all interpretations of the GI bill have reached us. We suggest today a study by voters of the measures and arguments in the voters' pamphlet, and will, before election, report our own conclusions on the measures. Our purpose today is to stimulate consideration and discussion of this important matter.

FOR 4TH TERM
KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—(Answering Mrs. G. E. Lewis) I strongly disagree with you, Mrs. Lewis, on the fourth term question. I for one, out of many thousands, think he should be re-elected for a fourth term. To change presidents during war-time would be tragic for the American people. He has been in office since the start of the war, he has brought us this far along, and has done a good job of it, why not let him stay in office another term? Four years isn't a life time you know.

Besides he has done a lot of good for the American people since he took his place behind the president's desk. During the depression, when there was no work for the poor, he started the relief for the needy. This gave them food and clothing. Later on he put the Work Project Administration into being. This gave the people a chance to work for their living. They didn't work hard, and they didn't get much money, but it kept a roof over their heads, and they had plenty to eat.

Now, some people like to joke about the WPA, but they didn't laugh then, they were glad to get a job of any kind. There is many a family that remembers this good deed of President Roosevelt and they are willing to stick by him to the finish. This incident of his helping the poor doesn't sound to me like he's trying to get class hatred (in the general sense) into effect.

As for the United States heading for a dictatorship, I don't see how that could be possible. We still have our freedoms. To my knowledge he hasn't made a move to remove them. The presses still print what they wish, we still worship as we please, and the right to do whatever we wish is still our privilege (as this wouldn't have been written). Freedom of speech is still ours. True, if you make a public speech against someone's belief you may collect a few tomatoes and eggs, but this doesn't stop one from talking. You still have the right to get on top the Empire State building and shout if you want to. If dictatorship was in session this couldn't be.

As for the insinuation of President Roosevelt being a dictator, I don't get it. In the first place, he doesn't have the power to make a law or an order without the help of the two houses of Congress. If the law he wants to put into effect doesn't pass the Senate and the House of Representatives it's simply no

HIGH SCHOOL News Notes and Comment

By JUANITA SHINN
Mrs. B. B. Blomquist, dramatics teacher, and Walter Eschebeck, speech instructor, have announced plans for the organization of a local chapter of the Masque and Gavel society, a national high school organization sponsored for recognition of effectiveness in all forms of speech activity.

Its objectives are to recognize and promote significant student achievement in an area of speech in the high school, and to sponsor a better relationship between the high school and the community through a cooperative program with service clubs, churches and other recognized community groups.

The Masque and Gavel will be organized shortly, pending approval by student council. The society will be limited to 30 members who have already displayed effectiveness in speech and drama.

War savings stamps will be on sale Thursday, October 26, in Everett Vanderpool's room—room 221. The sale is to be handled by the Klamath Knights again this year. Much will be expected from the students since the 6th War Loan drive will start soon.

Plans are being formulated for a T. and I. Stocking dance similar to the one given last year, to be given some time next month.

The Krater staff is sponsoring a Hayseed dance on November 3, in the girls' gym. Doughnuts and cider will be served to those in attendance. Admission will be 50 cents for cou-

MEN AND WOMEN IN SERVICE

COLEMAN AT MARCH FIELD
Staff Sgt. James W. Coleman has returned to March Field, Calif., where he is stationed with the air forces. He has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Alton D. Morgan, 4th in Klamath Falls.

He also visited his sisters, Mrs. J. R. Cullen and Pvt. Midge Coleman who left September 15 for Fort Des Moines, Ia., to start her basic training with the WAC.

TWO BOCCCHIS IN NAVY
Mr. and Mrs. A. Bocchi of Pelican City have two sons in the navy, one of them overseas.

James D. Bocchi, S1/c, has been in the service six months and is now out on sea duty. James was a member of the 1943 champion basketball team at KUHS, and he also took part in track. He graduated from the local high school in 1943.

Also in the navy is Leo J. Bocchi, AMM3/c, now stationed in Jacksonville, Fla. He has been in the service two years. Leo, who played football at KUHS, graduated from that school in 1940.

He received training under the navy program at the University of Washington, was later moved to Oklahoma and from there to his present base in Florida.

Nerve-Wracking Days At Fort Driant Told by Fuller

"You hardly dared move up there," said Lt. Hugh Fuller, machine gun platoon leader. "When you did move you had to put your head down and run like hell."

Young Fuller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fuller, 2252 Vine, was describing the nine nerve-wracking days inside Fort Driant where Lt. Gen. George S. Patton with the U. S. 3rd Army before Metz finally withdrew American troops from a shaky foothold in that section because the promised reward was not worth the cost of casualties.

"We had machineguns in two ditches that joined in a triangle," Fuller said in telling his story to a United Press correspondent. "The Germans were only 30 feet away across a big ditch during most of the action. Two more guns were in foxholes made from shell holes, and two of them knocked out pillboxes. There the Germans were, and sniping from three knocked-out American tanks.

"It was rougher than hell. The Germans used burp guns, rifle grenades, machine guns, mortars, bazookas, and even artillery on us. At night we could hear them digging foxholes across the ditch. It was eerie waiting for somebody to make a move. They did at anything that moved.

"Once a German machinegun opened up on four litter bearers carrying wounded down the ditch and they killed one of them. They did a great job. After they got the wounded out of the fort, they had to cross a 150-yard open stretch to the woods."

"It's the Water"

Monks discovered centuries ago that a certain type of water made better beer

In 1895 Leopold F. Schmidt discovered an equally superior brewing water in the subterranean springs of Tumwater!

It is widely recognized by scientists and master brewers that one of the most important factors in making good beer is the natural brewing properties in the water itself.

"It's the Water" has a definite meaning when applied to Olympia, which, combined with brewing skill, premium quality grains and hops, and "One of America's Exceptional Breweries," gives Olympia its clean taste and rare good flavor.
