By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—In confidential moments, Julian Rice admits that his idea for "revolutionizing" baseball was born in a dream on Halloween. . . . But that doesn't mean the idea is a nightmare; he takes it very seriously and baseball could do worse than to give it a serious trial. . . . Rice, a contract bridge teacher and a lawyer, has approached what he considers an unfair rule in baseball in a spirit of scientific inquiry and thinks he has the answer.

WHAT'S THE PERCENTAGE?
The unfairness in the foul ball rule, Rice says, is that a batter can hit a couple of screaming liners that barely curve foul and he's charged with two strikes. Then he barely touches one to foul it up onto the screen and it doesn't cost him anything at all. . . . If he gets a 50 per cent "piece" of the ball, it's likely to be an easy pop fly, but if he's only 2 per cent right in his swing and already is charged with two strikes, there's no penalty for the inaccuracy.

BAILEY ACQUITTED OF LARCENY CHARGE

HIS ZONE IDEA
What Rice proposes to do about this is to divide foul territory into zones. . . . One zone on each side of the present foul lines would be "free foul" territory into which a batter could hit—not bunt—as many fouls as he wanted without penalty. . . . The rest of the area would be the "penalty foul" zone and every foul into it would be ruled a strike, even the third one. . . . And, from his viewpoint, why not the third? A batter who can't come closer to a fair hit than a foul behind the plate deserves to perch on the bench. . . . The size of these free and penalty foul zones will be decided by experiments—and Rice hopes to stage a few experimental games this fall. . . . For a starter, he'll make things easy by extending the foul lines back through the plate so as to form a V-shaped penalty zone. This may be increased or decreased if it turns out that free fouls are too numerous or too few.

Robert Bailey was acquitted of a charge of larceny by embezzlement when a jury of five women and seven men returned a verdict of not guilty at 8:45 p. m., Tuesday night. The jury had withdrawn at 3:45 that afternoon.

Bailey was tried Monday and Tuesday in the circuit court, with A. C. Yaden serving as his attorney and District Attorney L. Orth Sisemore directing the prosecution. He was charged with the embezzlement of $500 from the Mecca pool room, where he was an employee.

A motion for a directed verdict was introduced by the defense, Tuesday morning, on the grounds that the state had failed to produce sufficient evidence. The motion was overruled by Circuit Judge D. R. Vandenberg.

heater and oil circulating heater. The project calls for a centrally located community building, workshop and paint storage building, and a large play area. Streets will probably be of concrete, Perrin said. The project is being constructed by the federal public housing authority for the navy.

Plans have been submitted to seven or eight contractors at this time, Perrin said. If the project is abandoned by the navy, the school board has a clause attached stating that the board shall have the privilege of re-purchasing the land at the price for which it was sold.

CRANBERRY CROP
ASTORIA, Nov. 15 (AP)—Twenty-seven acres of bog in Clatsop county yielded 4500 boxes of cranberries this year, County Agent Don Jossy reported. He said the crop was about the same as last year, but the berries were smaller.
