

ROUTINE ITEMS OCCUPY CITY COUNCIL MEET

Routine business of city operation took up more than half the council's time Monday night as various residents appeared with problems for the fathers to iron out.

Lawrence Nash and Wiley Knighten, cab line operators, asked the council to revoke an agreement signed January 19, 1938, between taxi companies and the city, because under existing conditions many of the regulations were obsolete. Especially cited was the clause embracing a charge of $2 per hour waiting time.

Nash said that terminal costs since the war had advanced approximately 175 per cent, up-keep some 400 per cent, and that prices were still within the old bracket. The matter was referred to the police committee.

No Heat
The old heating problem was again presented to the council, this time by E. Gordon of the Marion apartments. Gordon observed that despite the fact rates by the Klamath Heating company were raised last month, there had been no hot water and little heat the past three days. It was suggested that Gordon file a direct complaint with the public utilities commissioner.

"Baldy" Evans, who conducts dances at the armory, asked the council for an opinion on the New Year's eve dance as the date falls on Sunday this year. Councilman Walter Wiesendanger made a motion that the ordinance which prohibits Sunday night dances stand and the council approved.

Stronger Light
On recommendation of Councilman Harvey Martin through Wiesendanger, the council approved placing a more powerful light in the center above the Main street bridge, and referred the new installation at Main and Alameda to the traffic safety committee.

MIGRANT LABOR CAMP DISBANDED

With the conclusion of the spud harvest the migrant labor camp at Merrill has been disbanded and practically all material has been moved to Coberg, Ore., for construction of buildings for next year.

Mexican nationals housed at Merrill, Malin, and Bonanza have all been shipped out and the camps are 40 per cent torn down. German war prisoners are still working the onion harvest in the Tulake area however.

There were 1250 Mexican nationals employed this year in the basin and all have left except in a few isolated cases where they are kept the year around. A meeting of county farm labor committees will be held at Portland, December 5, to discuss the need for transported workers next year in Oregon, prospects for various types of out of state labor and needed legislation on farm labor recommended by farmers.

POLIO CASES RECORDED

PORTLAND, Nov. 21 (AP)—Two new civilian infantile paralysis cases in the same family and one at the naval barracks here were recorded today by Dr. Thomas L. Meador, city health officer.

Nine cases have been listed at the barracks this month, four of them fatal.

Disposal of Wine Made Difficult

PORTLAND, Nov. 21 (AP)—Oregon wine retailers may be prevented by a federal law from selling their stocks of dessert wines to wholesalers for resale to the Oregon liquor control commission.

Retailers, under their federal tax stamp, are limited to the sale of no more than five gallons at a time. Dealers here have entered a plea at Washington for relaxation of the regulation in order to clear their shelves of fortified wines before the Burke bill takes effect December 7.

The bill limits sale of that type of wine to state liquor stores.

JUST A JOKE

GLADSTONE, Nov. 21 (AP)—The 16-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Huber was run over by her grandfather's car—and came up unhurt and laughing.

The only traces of the accident were tire marks on her abdomen.

Lowering of Vote Age Requested

PORTLAND, Nov. 21 (AP)—A resolution asking the state legislature to lower the Oregon voting age from 21 to 18 years was passed by the Oregon Democratic clubs meeting here last night.

"When men are taken into the army to take up arms they should be allowed to vote for the persons directing the affairs of the country for which they are fighting," said Mrs. Maude B. Thomas, Oswego, who introduced the resolution.
