Illness would be retarded if he continued to bear the responsibilities of his cabinet portfolio.

Underlook Career

Stettinius, son of a wealthy family, ignored the easy life he could have led and undertook an active industrial career.

By 37 he was chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation.

He was supervising the expenditure of vast sums as lend-lease administrator at the age of 40 and when nearly 43 was appointed under secretary of state.

Succeeded Welles

He entered the state department in October of 1943, as successor to Sumner Welles, who had resigned.

A native of Chicago, where he was born October 22, 1900, he was educated at Pomfret school in Connecticut and at the University of Virginia.

north of Julich; Koslar, 3000 yards west, and Kirchberg, 4000 yards due south. Flood waters of the Roer flowed through the Earmen streets, hampering the Americans but forcing the Germans from cellars in the village. Hundreds of shells blasted the town. German artillery replied in kind, bombarding the ninth army from high ground east of the Roer.

Spur Toward Karlsruhe

The U. S. seventh army stabbed a spur 12 miles north from Strasburg at the Rhine toward Karlsruhe in Germany.

Flying weather deteriorated again but the ninth air force got in close with attacks all along the Roer river line in the 18 miles between Limnich, Julich and Duren. At one place, the pilots dive-bombed Germans at one end of a tiny village while doughboys pushed in from the other side.

Harry Edgerton, Adin lumberman and chairman of the natural resources committee of the council, called on a number of members for reports, speakers including Dr. A. F. Auble, Modoc county supervisor; Mel Barron, Modoc forest supervisor; Ellisworth Scammon, USES manager at Alturas, and others.

Malcolm Epley, president of the Klamath chamber, spoke briefly about the background of the interstate meeting and suggested it be made an annual affair. Charles Stark, Klamath chamber secretary; Charles Mack, Weyerhaeuser Timber company and District Attorney L. Orth Sismore, were praised for making the local arrangements.

Several visitors were from Tulelake, including residents of both Modoc and Siskiyou counties. Clark Fensler and Howard Dayton spoke for the Tulelake visitors.

BOND WAGON TO APPEAR IN BLY

The Klamath county bond wagon will appear at Bly tonight, Monday, and tomorrow, November 28, at Chiloquin.

The show will include Vern Owens, co-chairman of the drive, Myrtle C. Adams, chairman, the marine orchestra, Jean Bolin, recently chosen Miss Klamath, and Lloyd Rauw, singer.

The 6th War Loan committee is attempting to help these localities put over their bond sales, and is supplying the entertainment as a means of increasing the interest in this drive.

According to Paul A. Lee, the type "C" bonds must be purchased before November 30 in order to apply on the tax assessment which is due January 15, because it is necessary that the bonds be held for 60 days before this time.

Although these bonds may apply on the quota, the sale of them has not been very heavy, so everyone is urged to remember that it will be necessary to purchase them before the end of the month.

strated success in Klamath county as a result of the drive.

Thanks Aides

He praised John Eblinger and DeLos Mills, drive chairmen, for the work they did, and thanked all others who helped.

Owens said that if any appreciable amount is received above quota, it can be saved as a nest-egg for next year. He pointed out that after the quotas were set, changes were made in the military hospitality set-up which made it possible to scale down $5000 originally set for that purpose. A substantial part of the war chest quota goes to the USO, which is now operating extensively here.

Marine Major Finds Revenge Sweet Against Japs in Palau

(By Staff Sergeant Ward Walker, marine corps combat correspondent, formerly of the Chicago Tribune. Distributed by The Associated Press.)

PELELIU, Palau Islands (Delayed)—Seldom has a man gained such complete vengeance...

This action is in its final stages now. Disorganized and cut off from their supplies, the Japs are holed up in caves—living in filth, dying of thirst, hunger, and marine explosives.

One of the marines who watches the deathrattle of the caves without any pity in his flint-gray eyes is Major Michael Dobervich, 28, of Ironton, Minn.

He was one of the defenders of Bataan. He was one of the men with Lt. Col. Edward Dyess in the "march of death." He saw his men bayoneted and beaten to death by their Jap captors when they were too exhausted to move. He hiked the 80 miles without food or water through the jungle heat of the Philippines. He was kicked in the stomach by a Jap soldier, beaten in the face by another.

And so there's almost a smile on his face as the days pass and the Japs hold out in their caves.

"I would say a lie if I said I didn't enjoy this," he said. "I am not a cruel man. I would treat them kindly if they surrendered to me. But I am glad they want to fight it out."

It comes as no surprise to Dobervich that the Japs are holding out here to the last man.

"Those of us left alive after the march of death were lifted into a group in an open field," he recalled. "We were kept bareheaded for nearly four hours in the sun until we were 'rotted up' enough.

"A Jap captain made a speech. I think of that talk often. He told us of the Jap conception of how Japan would rule the Pacific and everything in it. 'You are our enemies,' he screamed. 'You will always be our enemies. You are not entitled to good treatment. We will fight you for 10, even 100 years more if you are all dead!'

Dobervich was graduated from North Dakota State university in 1939 and was commissioned in the marine corps the same year. He was assigned to duty in Shanghai with the famed fourth regiment, one of the four proudest organizations.

That handful of marines landed in the Philippines December 2. With the army they fought step by step until they were forced to surrender on April 9, 1942.

Nearly a year later, after eating out an existence at a Jap prison camp, Dobervich and nine others escaped, finally reaching the United States December 16, 1943.
