PORTLAND, Dec. 6 (A)—The war, and the party's failure to convince the people it is a liberal party, were cited by the Readers' Digest's roving editor today as the basic reasons for the republican defeat in the last election. the republican detest in the last election.

Stanley High declared that only by proving it is a liberal party during the next four years and not just during the four months before the 1948 election can the republicans hope to elect the next president.

He said: "The party must start initiating liberal measures. It must take the ball and run, instead of hoping to get it on a fumble." By JUANITA SHINN
