Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY
THAT old problem—the housing of Klamath's service men's hospitality center—is still unsettled.

EPLEY

The housing troubles experienced by the Commandos, and some of the rest of us who tried to help them, are being duplicated to some extent under USO. Although USO got off to a fine start with the announced lease and proposed remodeling of the Arcade garage building, nothing has actually been done (except to sign the lease papers) toward putting the USO program into that structure.

Helped Biddle

When Corcoran some years ago was calling congressmen and saying, "This is the White House speaking—we expect you to jump," he managed to befriend a great many government men, clearing paths for their advancement in office, bringing young lawyers into powerful government jobs from their insignificant labors. One of those he helped was Biddle.

Then Corcoran quit government service (which was about to quit him because of his growing unpopularity) in order to cash in on his connections, in a way not unlike among public men. His friends say he was disillusioned by his government experience, but he was not a man of many illusions. He played the game ruthlessly, in the government or out. He married, had a child, and his friends announced he intended to make a million dollars and enjoy life.

Federal Office Space

If the federal government intends to go into a federal building construction program immediately after the war, a good place to do some of that work is at Klamath Falls. The federal building here is not adequate for the government offices located here plus those which should be brought to this community for administration of various federal activities in this important area.

Hood River Incident

THIS column, as its readers well know, has never wasted any sympathy on those disloyal Japanese at Tulelake who have shown, through trouble-making enterprises, that they have no love for America and would like to see it lose the war.

Not In Mood

BUT as I say nothing is likely to come of the Littell charge that Corcoran influenced his friend the attorney general in the specific matter of a Georgia shipyard case, largely because congress is the only force likely to pursue the charge, and congress is not in the mood. The truth is the heart was taken out of it in the last election. It will pass such acts as the freezing of the social security tax against Mr. Roosevelt's wishes, because it had planned that and knows increase of the tax January 1 is not justifiable for any social security purposes.

WHEAT

CHICAGO, Dec. 8 (AP)—New seasonal highs were established by some wheat deliveries and other grains were firm for a time today but rye dropped sharply after mid-session and the break affected prices in other pits. Near the close prices moved into new low ground for the day. Local selling drove wheat prices down after the June and September contracts had reached new seasonal peaks. Early strength on wheat was attributed to purchases by cash interests and rebuys, credited to the Southwestern millers. A trade publication, the Southwestern millers, had agreed to increase cash wheat four cents and that the new maximums may become effective this week.

WPB REQUESTS BAN ON OUTDOOR LIGHTS

The war production board has asked that outdoor Christmas lighting be dispensed with again this holiday season, according to Charles Stark, secretary of the Klamath county defense council. Indoor lighting displays are not affected by the request, Stark stated. City and county officials and chambers of commerce were asked to pass the request along to the public.
