Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

THE matter of dividing the 17th state senatorial district—now covering five counties—is brought up again in a recent editorial in the Bend Bulletin. Deschutes county, of which Bend is the county seat, is one of the counties in the district now served by Senator Marshall Cornett of Klamath Falls.

EPLEY

Two recent attempts to reapportion the district have failed. The last one, sponsored by Senator Cornett, went by the board due to the clubbiness of the senate; the solons simply couldn't bring themselves to take an action that would eliminate one of their members, and their refusal put personalities above justice. In that case, it was Umatilla—an over-represented county—which would have been affected by the change.

The Bulletin points out that Dr. J. A. Best, of Pendleton, one of two Umatilla senators, has now resigned. "With Dr. Best leaving the senate," said the Bulletin, "there would seem to be a better chance than at any previous time to effect a change. This is not because his post will remain vacant, but because his successor will not be in the same position with respect to official associations and senatorial relations."

• • • •

Unfair

THE Bulletin re-directs public attention to the distorted situation now existing as respects the Umatilla districts and the 17th, as follows:

Dr. Best, it is to be noted, has represented Umatilla county in the state senate. Umatilla, by the 1940 census, had a population of 26,030. Marshall Cornett represents Jefferson, Crook, Lake, Deschutes and Klamath with a combined population of 72,986. That, certainly, does not represent fair treatment for those five counties. Nor is that all the story. Umatilla has another senator whom she shares with Morrow and Union in a joint district. The population of those three counties is 47,766. In effect that population of 47,766 has two senators as against one for a population of 72,986.

Another Try

SENATOR CORNETT has declared that he will again, in his forthcoming term, seek reapportionment of the 17th district. In the election campaign, he was attacked for this statement by democrats in Deschutes county, who alleged that reapportionment would be possible only in 1951 under state constitution.

As to this, the Bulletin concludes:

It may be well to invite the attention to the opinion of Attorney General Van Winkle to be found at page 161 of his biennial report for the years 1932-1934. We shall not trouble you with a discussion of the whole opinion but shall simply quote from it as follows: 'The legislature is not limited in the creation or change of legislative districts, to the session immediately following the taking of the census by the United States, or the State of Oregon." The opinion is based on a decision of the Oregon supreme court in the case of Baker County vs. Benson reported in 40 Oregon at page 207.

Here then is wishing more power to Senator Cornett in his proposal that his district be subdivided. The one bad thing about it is that if he is successful we may lose him as our senator.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—There has been remarkably little in-kicking of dental work or stealing of the ball here by the New Dealers and radicals since the election. Of course the Dies committee ball was stolen and thrown away harshly and immediately. Chairman Dies and his aides were one day recently copying some committee records concerning the radicals and communists largely, in their two rooms in the house office building, which they occupied for years past. Without notice, a house employee appeared with "orders from Sam Rayburn," the speaker, announcing he wanted those rooms immediately.

A crew came in, bundled and tied all the records, removed them to a storehouse in the basement where Dies cannot get to them. Dies did not complain and there was nothing in the papers. Then again, Chairman Theodore Francis Green, democrat, is rather uppishly investigating republican election victories in Ohio and Indiana, not any democratic victories, of course. But this reflects the unusual personal inclinations of Senator Green, rather than a political movement. He thinks that if the republicans won anywhere, there must have been something crooked about it. These are exceptions.

The broader moderating general tone is illustrated by an inner incident involving the White House and Senator Byrd. Mr. R. thought he had a little humorous irony in store for the Virginian, whose solid democratic state had developed many unexpected Dewey counties in the election, and who, somewhat ironically had been appointed chairman of the inauguration committee, which was to handle the expenses for Mr. Roosevelt's fourth assumption of office. Mr. Roosevelt smilingly, at a press conference after election, said he was economizing on the inauguration, would hold it at the White House for the first time to save building the usual stands at the Capitol. He would not need the $25,000 which had been appropriated, would spend only $2000.

• • • •

Ruffled Mr. Byrd

MR. R. handled the matter in such a way as to ruffle and refute Byrd, the economizer who had so often accused the president of being a spendthrift, and the papers played it that way. But a few days later there came from the White House, a statement which sounded almost like an apology. It said Byrd's committee had not known the president planned to save money on the inauguration when it appropriated the $25,000. No one had asked for such a gratuitous statement of minor fact. What could it mean?

Well, it seems the literal-minded Byrd had taken the president at his word on the $2000 limit. He had told his clerks to spend that much and no more. The president was only kidding, or made a bad estimate, or something. The White House found its simple inauguration could not be held for $2000 or anything like that. To get Byrd to loosen up more money, it issued practically an apology.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt Won

ADVANCE notices of the president's new program to be submitted in January do not justify either the widespread suspicion that CIO and its radical associates will move in immediately to take over the government and run it that way. Perhaps they are being clever and holding back until the alert fears in the country die down, and intend to work gradually and quietly through the coming four years toward their ends, but then again, they may realize they did not win the election, but Mr. Roosevelt did. At any rate Mr. Roosevelt seems to be going so far on the assumption that he won it, and of course no new radical or particularly CIO ventures were proposed by him in his campaign speeches and promises, although some were hidden in the platform.

Congress thinks he will plump on inauguration day for an extension of social security, better unemployment compensation, lay down a more inspiring program for the 60,000,000 promised jobs, perhaps even advocate "an annual wage guarantee." (CIO auto workers are primarily interested in this but it cannot be done) yet will hardly go as far as proposing the block or guillotine for all republicans and all democrats except CIO.

Of course, after V-E, it will be a different proposition.

JAPANESE QUESTION

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., (To the Editor)—Much has been said about what to do with Japanese-Americans and about the action of the American Legion post at Hood River, Ore., in erasing the names of Japanese from the post honor roll.

No doubt their action was prompted by 100 per cent patriotism as was the action of members of the Boston Tea Party. But knowing the handicap under which white people must labor to compete with Japanese, it is a reasonable guess that commercialism and selfishness may have impelled an unusual patriotic glow, as it does in many, too many cases.

To know the competitive conditions in Hood River is to guess that selfishness in this case was born of self-preservation (the first law of nature).

The competition in Hood River is not a life and death struggle, but the competition peculiar to that locality is such that to meet it 100 per cent, detracts from the American standard of living of which we boast, are proud of, and we are encouraged to fight for its continuance as our boys are now doing in our armed forces overseas.

Only new legislation of the future can deport Japanese-Americans. Should this happen, they would be victims of circumstances (not of their making) and it would be no tougher on them than it is on our boys now overseas who are victims of circumstances (not of their making.)

Japanese-Americans need not be set down in Tokyo if they should happen to be deported. With American backing, they could colonize some island in the Pacific, of which we should retain some good one, which we are now paying for in precious blood and money.

Should this happen to the American-Japanese and if they are imbued with the proper spirit, from their island home would filter ideals to aid future generations of their race.

If this should happen, and it should, we would have established a splendid American precedent to serve as a warning to those regimes in this country who wish to live apart but yet expect to receive the full benefits and blessings of the nation.

THOMAS ON RUMORS

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—I ask space to publicly comment on rumors locally current which seem to concern many people interested in both electric power production and water-right protection.

First, about diverting Klamath river into Pitt river, to which attention was called by your editorial of December 1:

I have read this army engineers' report. In it is the suggestion that the Klamath might be diverted immediately below Klamath Falls down through the irrigation project and thence to Pitt river by canal and tunnel or by canal and power lift.

Aside from the doubtful practicality of such a proposal it should be apparent that it is politically impossible. Oregon would never consent to it and perhaps Siskiyou and Del Norte counties would object. In fairness to the report it should be said that it definitely does not recommend such diversion but only suggests it, also suggesting the political difficulties which would be encountered. It should also be remembered that this report was made in 1933 pursuant to section 1 of the rivers and harbors act of 1927, a time when the attitude of the national administration towards water use and power development was wholly different from what it is today.

(Editor's Note: The Pitt river diversion proposal mentioned in the above paragraph is more alive than a mere suggestion in a 1933 report. It is currently under investigation by army engineers).

Second, the rumor that Copco will build a large power plant on Klamath river immediately after the war: Considering the reliability of the men who have told me that this statement was recently made here by an official of that company I will not dispute the claim that the statement was made, but I do doubt that the company will try to carry it out. To do so there would first be necessary the passage of an act by the Oregon legislature drastically changing the water-right status of Klamath waters. It is true the company did nearly obtain such an act in 1931, so near that it took a veto by the governor of the state to prevent it, but I doubt if it could secure such an act now. People here seemed asleep to the value of their power and water rights in 1931, but they are not asleep now. And neither do I think the power company will find the bureau of reclamation so complaisant now as it was then; indeed, I am now impatiently waiting for permission from Hon. Abe Fortas, undersecretary of the interior, chief of the power division of that department, therefore in charge of the power activities of both the Bonneville-Grand Coulee and the Central Valley-Shasta dam power systems, for permission to publicise a letter I have from him which will effectively show that in neither of the above rumors have we anything to worry about, that much better things are in store for us; and also scotch another current rumor that interconnection between the Bonneville-Grand Coulee and Central Valley-Shasta dam systems is not contemplated.

"A REMINDER"

We have started the job in the Philippines,
And, though progress is being made;
Our work is marked with unpleasant scenes
And a price is being paid!

It makes us all happy, this new event,
And it shortens our road to home;
But let's not forget that lives have been spent,
That you and I have that home!

If many could live, but just for a day,
Where our war is being fought;
A much higher price they would gladly pay,
That some boy might not be shot!

Some talk about wages and shorter hours,
And point out how much they are saving!
The boys out here work twice the hours,
Yet, who does most of the raving?
So—as you celebrate our victory,
I ask that you might pause;
To think of those you will never see,
The boys who fought for our cause!

The above was written the second day of the invasion of the Philippines. After seeing some of the wounded coming back from one day of battle, you wonder about some of the people back home. Perhaps, if they felt so unimportant, as we do now, they wouldn't cry so loudly!

ANSWER TO ENGLE

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—I read Marine Weston Engle's letter to you and would like very much to comment on some of the controversial points which have been discussed from time to time concerning the service men here in Klamath Falls.

First of all I'd like to say this: all of us here know, and we appreciate, what the service men have done for us, but we certainly do not appreciate some of the things some of them do and say since they have returned home. They are rude, uncaring of other people's feelings, and lots of them are positively profane in both speech and action.

I know these fellows have all just come back from where they didn't have time to be polite, but they certainly have time to now! No one can tell me they have forgotten all of the manners they had before they left! They need to realize that they'll get along a whole lot better if they will just "mind their manners."

I'm not a dried up old maid, either, "fellas." I'm only 22 and I know whereof I speak.

I have seven brothers in the service myself, so here's to a better understanding between the service men and townspeople.

LIFE SAVERS

Birds and monkeys save the lives of soldiers lost in the jungles. By watching what these creatures eat, men learn what berries and fruits are good to eat and which are poisonous.

WHEAT

CHICAGO, Dec. 13 (AP)—December wheat was steady today but other grain futures were easy to weak with corn and rye suffering the heaviest losses. Profit cashing following more than a week of rising prices was apparent in all pits.

Offerings in the wheat pit never were heavy and prices held to within an eighth or a quarter of a cent of the previous close most of the session. The trade was local in character and some selling was attributed to weakness of the corn market.

Announcement that the office of price administration had increased ceiling prices for cash wheat four cents had little effect on the market.

Corn was heavy almost from the start.

Rye broke as much as 1½ cents under local selling prompted by weakness of the corn market.

Oats were off as much as half a cent.

At the close wheat was ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower than yesterday's finish, December $1.70. Corn was off ⅛ to 1c, December $1.14. Oats were ⅜ to ½c lower, December 68¼c. Rye was ⅛ to 1⅛c lower, December $1.11⅝. Barley was off ⅛ to ⅜c, December $1.13½.

Grandma liked to "rub" miseries of chest colds and other simple pain. She medicated her rub but insisted it contain mutton suet. She liked the way mutton suet disappeared as it helped carry medication to nerve ends in skin to relieve pain. Today science has modernized Grandma's old-time pain relief principle to bring you Penetro, the salve that contains mutton suet plus 5 active ingredients. Mothers now thank Grandma for her old idea that created this newer relief.
In this colds' season, Penetro is especially helpful in easing chest muscle tightness, chest rawness, loosening phlegm, relieving coughs. That's because Penetro melts instantly, quickly vanishes to act 3 ways (1) To relieve pain at nerve ends in skin. (2) To ease chest muscle tightness by counter-irritation. (3) To soothe irritated breath passages through inhaled aromatic vapors. Penetro is so helpful, too, in easing rheumatic and neuralgic pain, taking sting from chapped lips and nostrils, and as a soothing dressing for bruises, minor cuts. APOSTASY

Is it possible for a converted man to so far apostatize as to finally be lost? Answer: Luke 3:38 says that Adam was a son of God; Gen. 1:26, that he was made an image of God; Gen. 3:13, that he transgressed; that as a result therefore, Rom. 5:12, as through one man sin entered into the world, and death through sin; and so death passed unto all men, for that all sinned. That's the statement regarding Adam, God's created man. We have a parallel case in 2 Cor. 11:3 where Paul said, "But I fear" (fear what?) "lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve in his craftiness, your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity and the purity that is toward Christ." Adam was a child of God by creation, but the Corinthians were children of God by regeneration. Paul said, just as Adam fell by the seducing influence of the devil, I fear lest the same thing might happen to you.

"LET HIM THAT THINKETH HE STANDETH TAKE HEED LEST HE FALL." I Cor. 10:12.
