PRESS COVERAGE OF ITALY SCORED

By RUTH COWAN
ADVANCE ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Dec. 17 (AP) (Delayed)—After a trip into the front lines during which they were under enemy fire, members of the touring house military committee expressed belief at a press conference today that American newspapers had failed to give a complete picture of the rigors of the Italian campaign. The congressmen said this was possibly caused by a lack of comprehension of the importance of the Italian campaign on the part of both press and public back home. Several of the congressmen asserted they believed the correspondents were trying to present a true picture, and a query from Rep. John E. Sheridan (D-Pa.) on whether censorship was a factor brought a reply from Brig. Gen. Arthur J. McCrystal, chief of information for the censorship section that outside of military security correspondents were free to write as they pleased.

"I think the story of the little men with wet feet and big men with wet feet has not been fully emphasized," Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R-Conn.) said. The proportion of truck to U. S. army troops is one to every seven men, as compared with one to every 90 soldiers in World War I.

One job we haven't finished in 54 years

1 In 1890, we started building the Union Oil refinery system. Today, 54 years later, we're still building it. Our "plant" has never been finished. And it probably never will be. Of course, we've thought it was, from time to time.

2 Back in 1919, we put in several million dollars worth of new equipment that gave us the last word in straight run refining. Yet during the next 7 years we installed cracking plants that greatly improved our production. This should have held us for a while.

3 But 13 years later... in 1939, we began a $6,000,000 plant that utilized hydroforming. Then we built a $26,000,000 plant to produce 100 octane. And today, we're installing a $12,000,000 catalytic cracking unit. Now obviously no one likes to spend that kind of money on new equipment when the old would probably "do" for several years.

4 But you can't stop improving a refinery in America and stay in business. Competition won't let you. Each new refining process that's developed either lowers costs or improves quality. And there's always some company willing to install that process so that they can go after your customers with better products or lower prices.

5 Consequently, you either keep your tools sharp or you don't whittle. As a result... American oil companies in the last 25 years have doubled the amount of gasoline they can make per barrel of crude, raised the quality of gasoline to 100 octane and over...

6 ...lowered the price from 29.7c a gallon to 13.4c (excluding tax) and outproduced all the rest of the world combined. Without competition this could never have happened. For no monopoly—private or governmental—has ever had the incentive to achieve such a record.
