Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

THERE has been occasional suggestion in this column that fair-minded people avoid unjust conclusions about certain groups of people on the basis of individual unfavorable incidents.

This goes for service men, labor union people, employers, and others who may receive criticism because of the acts of persons in their group for which they cannot possibly be responsible. Something of this kind has been going on for years in connection with the Klamath Indians. We have always felt that the big majority of Klamath Indians are fine, worthy people, and that the activities of a minority (usually inspired by liquor furnished them by EPLEY renegade whites) have brought the entire group unjustly into disrepute. We have mentioned this before, and today we have a letter from a Klamath Indian that bears out that thought and carries an appeal we believe is worthy of consideration.

The letter resulted from an incident at the council the other night, in which comparison was made between the police picking up a young school child and a "drunken Indian." Here is the letter:

BEATTY, Orc. (To the Editor)—Being a full blooded American, I read the American papers and sympathize with the troubles of American but I've noticed time and time again that whenever something unpleasant happens like the incident of the "paddy wagon," an Indian has to be mentioned. Why couldn't Mr. Christie simply say "a drunk on Klamath avenue" instead of "a drunken Indian." It's true we Indians indulge in the intoxicating liquors but I've seen white people, men and women, who were just as drunk as an Indian Indians are no angels and we don't claim to be, but some day some of us are going to be "buddy buddy" with the same persons who puts the Indian below his level. If he happens to go below or above as we will at death. We have no dislike for the American white people. In fact if you white people hadn't taken over our country, I imagine I'd freeze running around clad only in rabbit skin.

We Indians have had education just as you, we worship the same God, we dress as warmly as you, we cat the same foods, obey the same OPA rules, we have brothers, sons, husbands, and even sisters in the American forces, we buy bonds, yes and we drink wine just like you white people. We're only different in color and we are only the original Americans.

I'm sorry some of you feel we are a lower class than you. Some of us Indians have the brains and ability to get ahead if only we were given the chance.

You like our country?

Well, how about forgetting our faults and

York also have the word freedom attached to what not.

But what is this "freedom" for which we yearn? It must be something different from that freedom which we have had. It is not alone democracy, for we have had that, still have it. Russia uses the same word to describe what it wants also, but that, obviously, is not the kind of "freedom" our people are thinking about. No one describes it exactly.

Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill specified four freedoms in the mislaid Atlantic charter, While they were generally approved they have proved hard to get, either for this country or the

A prophet of the new, undescribed cause Russell Davenport, has written a passionately patriotic poem, which conveys a description of

Thought Sublime

IITHE breed of freedom," he says, "is a breed of strife, restless and rude, reared to the earthly struggle of its time. Only the thought of freedom is sublime. Its flesh is knit of discord and of feud." This is a description of a current condition rather than a specific definition of a peaceful goal.

Mr. Roosevelt, in January 1941, gave a specific and limited definition of the Atlantic charter ideals.

Freedom of speech and expression, and freedom of religion (both of which we already have and know well), freedom from want, meaning (he said) "economic understandings which will secure to every nation a healthy, peaceful life," and freedom from fear, meaning (he said) 'a worldwide reduction of armaments to such a point that no nation can commit aggression.

These are things we want. But to seek free dom from want, must we abandon all other freedoms? Are we free if we are told by a federal government run by political (and therefore amenable) men where to work, how long, for how much?

Wrong in First Place

Some people actually think that would be freedom. They reason that the employe is now enslaved to the employer, so they wish to rush from his arms into the arms of the tate. Well, they are wrong in the first place. Employees had complete freedom to move where they wished under our system, to quit when they chose, to negotiate with their em-ployer through unions or directly for whatever they could get in a highly competitive labor market which has always existed in this country except in the off-times of depression, and even then it prevailed for the bulk of the workers as these never lost employment.

But you will not have individual freedoms, when the state is free to fix your wages, hours, work and leisure to what is supposed to be 'national interest," but which always may be crisscrossed with political interest, with reelection possibilities, the need of campaign funds, or mazuma passed under the table, as politic-or mazuma passed under the table, as politicians' salaries are never high.

If this is what our youth would call freedom, are they not following pied piper? Is it freedom to live on WPA directly, or indirectly through socialism or communism? Is it free to the worker to grant union monopolies and exclusive rights to work without compensation exclusive rights to work without compensation exclusive rights to work without compensation or taxation at the expense of the consumer? And if the union now is thus given "freedom" by enslavement to the state, what about us great people who pay the prices asked, and what of management? Are they free?

Does disarmament mean freedom? We had it before, and we were attacked. France and Britain were supposed to maintain complete disarmament of Germany and we had strict naval arms limitation with Japan. True, armaments are tax burdens on the people and tax burdens deny freedom but does not armament in this war really mean freedom for us, and perhaps may it not continue its meaning in the revolutionary condition of the post-war world?

I am asking. The war is being won for freedom, the election was won for freedom. Now what is it? Whatever the reasonable, thoughtful, clearheaded youth of the country wants, I am for it.

But I do not think it either voted for or wants what some of the propaganda group or-ganizations—now furnishing their leaders wage jobs and lucrative publicity (and I am not now referring to any foreign organization but our own)—are advertising as "freedom."

Christ Is Now Reigning on David's Throne

Jesus taught His disciples to pray "Thy kingdom come!" The church or kingdom was not then in existence. It did, however, come shortly with power. On the day of Pentecost some three thousand were beptised into Christ's kingdom. (Acts 2:38-47). This prayer which Jesus taught His disciples to pray was answered then in regard to the king-

Paul spoke of the kingdom's being in existence while he was preaching. He wrote thus to the church at Celesse in Col. 1:13, "Who delivered us out of the power of dark-ness, and translated us into the kingdom of the Son of His

The Japanese apparently were caught by surprise. Early B-29 formations found both anti-aircraft fire and interception light, but later arrivals encountered heavy opposition. Tokyo's busy industrial center was swept by great fires, returning airmen reported. Lt. Col. William McDowell, Brady.
