JOAN BERRY'S LAWYER FLAYS SCREEN ACTOR

By GENE HANDSAKER
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 29 (AP)—Joan Berry's attorney appealed to the words of Christ today in justification of her relations with Charlie Chaplin and told a jury in her paternity case against the comedian that "I feel we have here the man who is responsible for this baby's existence."

Joseph Scott, white haired churchman, declared that in the days of Moses, a woman caught in adultery was stoned to death, and recalled the incident in which such a one was taken before Christ in the temple.

"A lot of gray-haired old buzzards like Chaplin came up and demanded that she be stoned to death," Scott declared. "But Christ stooped and wrote in the sand those immortal words: 'Let him among you who is without sin cast the first stone at her,' and then to the woman added, 'Go, and sin no more.'"

"That is the philosophy of Christ, of whom I am a humble follower."

Pounding the railing of the jury box and shouting to the jurors, Scott told them: "I have been more than 50 years a member of this bar. I have seen this city grow from a little pueblo of 50,000. In all my experience I have never had anything affect me like this case, because I feel that we have here the man responsible for this baby's existence and I don't want to let him escape if we can prevent it."

When Scott declared the law of California provides that medical testimony is not infallible and a jury is not bound to accept it, Attorney Charles E. Millikan, Chaplin's counsel, objected. Superior Judge Henry M. Willis directed Scott to proceed with his argument, but when Joan's attorney cited another case in which a man had been held to be the father of a child despite medical testimony to the contrary, Millikan again objected. The court again refused to interfere.

Japs Produce Gas From Pines

By The Associated Press
The Japanese are producing from the roots of their pine trees high octane aviation gasoline equal if not superior to that type of fuel obtained from petroleum. Domei news agency reported today in a Tokyo broadcast.
"The picturesque Japanese pine, indispensable in every Japanese garden, has at last joined the ranks as a valuable munitions raw material," Domei said in a broadcast heard by the federal communications commission.
