PROCURING OFFICER SPEAKS IN KLAMATH

Lt. Webster A. Jones, traveling representative of the office of naval officer procurement from Portland, was a visitor in and around Klamath Falls yesterday, according to Mel Kennedy, recruiter-in-charge of the local navy recruiting station. While here Lt. Jones conferred with members of the ministerial association in an effort to procure additional navy chaplains. He cited instances of the fine work the chaplain corps is performing in the Pacific and spoke of the urgent need for additional chaplains to serve ashore and afloat with the navy. He also completed a survey of the medical and dental professions in this locality to uncover officer material for the medical corps. In the afternoon Jones and Kennedy met with seniors at the Klamath Union high school to discuss the navy aircrewmen program.
