Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

JUST two letters came to this desk in response to a suggestion the other day that readers send in their comments on the question of legalizing gambling.

EPLEY

But those two letters are most interesting in that they show agreement on the part of entirely different kinds of people.

One letter was from a church women's group. They declared emphatically, of course, against legalized gambling.

The other came from a man who gambles. He describes various gambling activities in this vicinity, and admits that he has participated. "I am a constant loser in these games," he says. He, like the church women, is opposed to legalized gambling.

Which demonstrates what we have argued before—that, in general, people who will gamble illegally will not lend their support to legalization of the business. The gambler who loses, in illegal games, the racketeer who cleans up, and the church people who think gambling (except bingo games and quilt drawings) is a scandalous sin, will team up to defeat the legalization of gambling. Their motives may be different, but their effect on any such proposal would be the same.

There are those who contend that the present public attitude toward gambling is hypocritical, that it should be accepted as inevitable and legalized to prevent crooked games and to insure a generous take for the benefit of taxpayers. But would the public generally accept this realistic viewpoint. Our two letters indicate otherwise.

Succession

THE following article on governorship succession in Oregon is borrowed from the Oregon Voter's February 10 issue:

If some genius would devise nice useful work for a lieutenant-governor to do between sessions of the legislature it might be possible to put the lieutenant-governor idea across in Oregon. Only rarely, or by accident, is a capably competent man elected lieutenant-governor in any small or moderately sized state. An occasional exception might be found in the very large and populous states, where the salary may be large enough to attract an able man. In general, the men who seek a lieutenant-governor's job are not of highest caliber. The Oregon senate again felt that way and rejected Senator Wallace's SJR 7, intended to create the lieutenant-governor position in this state.

Taken up just ahead of the Wallace resolution was SJR 8, by Committee on Elections and Privileges. This measure proposes a needed extension of the line of succession to the governorship. Present Oregon law stops with the proviso that if the governor dies or is incapacitated he shall be succeeded by the president of the senate, with speaker of the house next in line.

This is a faulty arrangement. Senate presidents sometimes resign or forfeit the office. No successor is named—unless there should be a special session—until the next legislature meets. Technically, there often is no senate president from the day of a general election until one is chosen by the newly assembled senate members at opening of the legislature. There is no speaker during that period. The succession proposed in the committee resolution names the secretary of state and the state treasurer to follow the speaker in the order listed.

The change, if approved by the house, will have to be effected through vote of the people by means of a constitutional amendment. Vote on the measure:

SJR 8, FOR ADOPTION in Senate, 2-5-45:

Yeas—Booth, Burke, Cornett, Ellis, Engdahl, Fatland, Hilton, Jones, Lamport, McKenna, Moser, Parkinson, Lee Patterson, Paul Patterson, Pearson, Rand, Stadelman, Strayer, Walker, Wheeler, Winslow, Zurcher, President Belton—23.

Nays—Gibson, Mahoney, Wallace—3.

Absent—Carson, Chessman, Newbry, Walsh—4.

The War Today

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

THE startling announcement by the government controlled Tokyo radio that Japan's policy is "not to reject any hand which offers peace" came to my desk in pre-dawn hours today while I was writing this article to report that I understand our forces in the Orient are worried for fear the allies won't be as grimly firm with Nippon as they are with Germany.

Without jumping to sweeping conclusions, the Tokyo statement certainly can be labeled as a fishing expedition. The Mikado's little men are scouting for an easy peace, and that thought fits the thesis of my article.

Murlin Spencer, Associated Press war correspondent who has been two years on the Pacific front, tells me there's widespread apprehension among the men that the end of the European war will find the American public weary of conflict and inclined to make a compromise peace with Japan. The Yanks who've been battling the barbarians in the heat of the stinking, disease ridden jungles don't want any temporizing. The want to beat the Japs to a pulp.

• • • •

Home-Front Won't Weaken

WELL, I don't believe for a moment the home-front will weaken. We shall see the job through, though the length of time it will take is problematical. The Japanese are fighting a delaying action, just as the Germans have been. They're pursuing this strategy in hope that we will indeed get weary and compromise. For this reason the European war has been a godsend to them. They haven't given a tinker's dam whether Hitler won or lost, so long as he delayed transference of allied war power to the Orient.

Much depends, of course, on Russia's attitude. If the Muscovites should join in the conflict against Japan. It would vastly expedite the end. It's a safe bet that this thought is in Tokyo's mind in today's peace feeler. They haven't overlooked, either, that Roosevelt and Churchill conferred over the Pacific war at Malta, en route to the meeting with Stalin.

A Japanese spokesman yesterday described the battle of the Philippines (which now has resolved itself into the battle of Luzon) as the strategical climax of the war. He recognized that allied success in the archipelago would place Japan itself in jeopardy.

Luzon Battle Successful

WELL, he's right, and the Luzon campaign can be written off as a success already, although we still have to wind up the terribly destructive fight for Manila against Nipponese suicide squads, and clean up scattered bodies of enemy forces in various parts of the island. As for the stricken capital, General MacArthur announced today that "the end of the enemy's trapped garrison is in sight."

The rest of the Japanese troops are widely dispersed. Some of them are cooped up on Bataan and Corregidor, of burning memories. Most of them are believed to have fled to the mountainous jungle country in the northern and northeastern parts of the big island.

There still remains considerable mystery as to how many troops General Yamashita has on Luzon and why he didn't make a stronger defense at the outset. He supposedly had at least 150,000 men, though more than 68,000 have since become casualties. So far as concerns Manila, his failure to make a big stand there isn't surprising because MacArthur himself didn't think it possible to defend the capital when the Japanese invaded Luzon.

It looks very much as though Yamashita, being blockaded from further help from home and knowing defense of Luzon was thus rendered hopeless, decided to fight a guerrilla-type delaying action in accordance with the general Japanese strategy.

GROUPS BEGIN WORK ON AID FOR SCHOOLS

SALEM, Feb. 14 (AP)—The house taxation and revenue committee began work today on bills designed to give state aid to schools, after more than 200 persons jammed the committee's hearing room to urge passage of a bill to give the schools $5,000,000 a year of income tax revenues.

Representatives of taxpayer groups, however, opposed the $5,000,000 measure on grounds that money should be used to reduce property taxes.

Mrs. Harry George, Portland, state Parent-Teacher association president, said "Oregon is neither too poor nor too niggardly to support a fine system of public instruction," while former State Sen. Ronald Jones of Marion county spoke for the increased aid in behalf of the Farmers' union.

George Huggins, Coos Bay, former house member, said the legislatures in recent history have written 400 pages of school law.

"You tell us how to do all these things," Huggins said, "but you don't give us any money to do them. The legislature hasn't given the schools a dime. It has said, 'Here is some money. Use it to reduce your taxes.'"

PANTS ON PLANE

LONDON, Feb. 14 (AP)— An RAF pilot, back at his base after a hedge-hopping attack on an enemy train, found a pair of German field service trousers hanging from a wing of his flak-damaged Spitfire. They apparently had been thrown into the air when the train blew up.

LUTHERANS HOLD FATHER-SON DINNER

One hundred and twenty-five fathers and sons were seated at the banquet tables at the Klamath Lutheran church for the father-son dinner on Monday, February 12, at 7 o'clock. Russell Toycen, president of the brotherhood, under whose auspices the banquet was staged, acted as toastmaster for the affair.

After the invocation had been delivered by the Reverend S. M. Topness, the guests enjoyed group singing. Following the dinner, which was served by the Klamath Lutheran Ladies' Aid, the program consisted of a piano solo by Larry Martin, an accordion solo by Gary Strong and several vocal duets by Harry Mason and Russell Toycen.

A greeting to the sons on behalf of the fathers was presented by Elliott Munger, and the response for the sons was given by John Larson. The main address of the evening was given by Major Joe Foss, who is one of the top air aces of this war. He told of his experiences as an aviator in the South Pacific theater of war, and at the conclusion of his talk, a number of questions were asked concerning aviation.

At the close of the evening, the Reverend Topness suggested the organization of a Boy Scout troop, and the brotherhood was encouraged to sponsor such a project. The idea was received with a great deal of enthusiasm, although definite plans are not yet underway.

Lyle Baker on Duty After Hospitalization

Lyle Baker, 21-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Baker, 926 Dolores, has returned to duty after having been hospitalized following wounds received while in action against the enemy in France.

Information received from the war department advised Baker's parents that his wounds occurred December 12. He has been awarded the Purple Heart.

CONDITIONAL FREEDOM GIVEN BENJAMIN MALE

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Feb. 14 (AP)—Benjamin Franklin Male, 73-year-old Oregon farmer who was convicted last week of voluntary manslaughter in a 40-year-old slaying, received a Valentine gift of conditional freedom today.

Criminal Court Judge Charles E. Miller imposed a suspended sentence of one to five years upon Male, after first upbraiding him for remaining in hiding since the 1905 slaying of Walter O. Smith, a village school teacher.

Male wept as the judge read his castigation, the first sign of emotion he had shown.

The suspended sentence was based upon good behavior and Male must keep in touch with the probation officer.

Male announced he would leave on the afternoon train for St. Helens, Ore., where he lived in seclusion from the law for so long.

Male came back voluntarily to stand trial for the slaying, which was precipitated when Teacher Smith disciplined one of Male's children.
