Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

It seems hardly possible that OPA will be foolish enough to close down several Klamath Falls cafes at a period when this city is jammed with people and the demand for places to eat is at an all-time high.

EPLEY

We do not for a minute suggest condoning violation of OPA regulations. OPA is justified in taking the necessary steps to keep everybody in line.

But in the imposition of penalties it is important that those penalties do not bear more heavily upon the public than upon those who have offended.

Be Prepared

Now is the time for all Klamath basin organizations, which intend to take any part in the U. S. engineers hearing on the diversion scheme, to wind up their preparations for that hearing.

The engineers have stated that oral testimony will be taken, but they want it supported by pertinent factual data, and any written material should be in the form of six copies.

The hearing will be held in the American Legion hall, near the courthouse, beginning at 10 a. m. next Tuesday. A pre-hearing meeting has been called by the chamber of commerce land use committee for Friday afternoon at 3 p. m. at the chamber.

It's now Brigadier General Elliott Roosevelt. The president's son entered the service as a captain, without previous experience.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—The forty billion dollar RFC job which Mr. Wallace reached for and missed, was next to have been tossed by the White House crowd to Marriner Eccles, federal reserve chairman, who at least knows something about the nation's financial base of capitalistic operations.

At a meeting of the top men around Mr. Roosevelt (Jimmy Byrnes, Marvin Jones, et al) it was decided all would get behind Fred Vinson, Kentucky ex-congressman, who has been an unostentatious assistant to Byrnes, directing economic stabilization.

Coming up from a small town lawyer to his congressional job, he found it insecure because his Kentucky district was always apt to go republican.

Rather Hardboiled

In his present war task he has been rather hardboiled in seriously doing what FDR has told him to do—and he would no doubt preside over the Jesse Jones financial dynasty the same way.

Some inside work is being done, however, to get someone with more experience in finance to do Mr. R's bidding in RFC, and some rather formidable people are trying to get Joseph P. Kennedy back in the government.

Here is as good a man as the New Deal ever had, whose career has been an ironic tragedy. He was ridden out of the London ambassadorship because he approved the Munich appeasement, which Mr. Roosevelt also approved, but with recrimination.

But what will gall any sense of justice is that he has given more to the war than any of those public deceivers who have made a good war business out of running him down. He has suffered one son killed, a son-in-law killed after six weeks of marriage to his daughter, a second son so seriously injured ramming a Jap destroyer he has not yet recovered.

Three of the highest military decorations have come to the family. A third son is in the navy, and a daughter is doing Red Cross work in France. The son who was killed was carrying a rocket bomb across the British channel, aimed at nazi munitions dumps in France, when it exploded prematurely off the French coast and blew his plane to bits.

You never hear these things, only the sly curses of agitators, living and fattening off the war by selling bitterness and hate against good Americans for high fees.

Ironical Example

If there is a more ironical example of the murderous nature of American politics today, I have not heard of it. The story explains why so few big men care to enter public service.

No one else is better fitted by experience or politics for the Jones job, but Kennedy probably will not get it.

Fervor of witnesses appearing for both Wallace and Aubrey Williams (nominated to head REA) ran to the skies. Here were two men dropped by Mr. Roosevelt for the campaign.

Williams, formerly youth administrator and WPA deputy, had not been popular and left the government before election. Like Wallace he was considered radical and much of a load on the administration.

Yet immediately after election both were named for bigger jobs than they had lost, and many men and women flocked to the senate to claim the good of the country required their services (presumably only between elections.)

The answer to this enthusiasm, as the listening senators made it out, was that in commerce Wallace would control 130,000 jobs while rural electrification is planning an expansion for post-war which would also give the harassed radicals (chased from government by the Dies committee or the pre-election trend of political events) a good place to return and alight for longer than the duration.

Congress will block the whole plan. The Wallace program to dole out 60,000,000 jobs by shoveling out federal funds 10 times faster than WPA ever did, is not popular and the Williams appointment is in dire jeopardy.

Congress is convinced these steps could bring socialism faster than anything else. The government could finally own all business by the process of lending it more and more money—just as banks acquire businesses by lending processes.

While congress has been unable to furnish any affirmative leadership to make managed capitalism work, it is certainly now again becoming a roadstop against the push toward socialism.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst

THE European war is sweeping across the screen with such speed that there's only a flash of time in which to examine individual operations, but we shouldn't overlook the significance of the Russian capture of Budapest, for its potentialities are tremendous.

The fall of this great city—most important communications center in all southeastern Europe—goes far towards opening the Danubian route into Austria. It means that the Muscovite forces in Hungary have just about smashed the lock on Hitler's back door—a fact which should be considered in connection with the thrust towards Austria via Czechoslovakia by the southern wing of the red forces assaulting Germany.

Now that's a big item. Naturally our attention is centered on the drive for Berlin, but after Berlin has fallen—after the reich has been slashed in two and the Hitlerites have been kicked out of the northern half—what then? Well, if the nazis still are capable of carrying on their fanatical suicide-war, we shall see them making a stand in Bavaria and Austria, providing their present plans materialize.

Then they will have the Alps at their backs, and in order to shorten the war it will be vastly important for us to be able to get at them through Austria as well as by attacking from the north.

Two Armies Released

THE fall of Budapest, after one of the most fiercely fought and bloody battles of the entire war, releases two strong red armies and while there has been no announcement as to their further disposition, observers generally have assumed that Budapest provided a terrible interlude in an offensive against Austria.

Incidentally, Stalin also disclosed a highly interesting item, in reporting that the nazi commandant at Budapest, Col. Gen. Pfeffer-Wildenbruch, and his staff were captured in a sewer. Stalin also took pains to repeat that when the Russians sent envoys to the German command in Budapest to demand surrender at the outset of the siege, the Hitlerites killed the envoys.

If so, I'd hate to be in the colonel general's battle-boots, and one doubts if he himself will be in them long. I'm reminded of a day in 1938 when I rode with the procession when Hitler made his triumphal entry into Czechoslovakia's Sudeetenland, after Munich. Pfeffer-Wildenbruch was in command of the nazi troops which took over the job of policing this territory, and the German element of the Sudeeten population threw flowers into his car—among many others—as he motored over the country highway. There won't be any roses for him this time.
