"beliefs" of senators are founded on definite word from returning officials. It seems genuine enough, and not an off-the-record hint to gain public support for the conference.

Stalin can hardly be expected to stand by and let American-British influence sweep through Asia. That would mean British repositioning of Hongkong and restoration in Shanghai, etc.

Visible results of the gathering are less inspiring, although they have received practically without criticism. No pledges were needed for the annihilation of Germany, now so near.
