SALEM, (Special Correspondence) — Another effort to erase a long-standing injustice in senatorial representation will be launched next week by Senator Marshall Cornett of the 17th district.

EPLEY

The Klamath senator has disclosed his intention of introducing a measure to redistrict a portion of the state in a manner to eliminate startling inequalities which stubborn senates previously have refused to touch.

The Cornett plan, which has been forecast in this column, calls for elimination of the 19th district including Morrow, Umatilla and Union counties. A new district would then be formed out of Klamath and Lake counties, now part of the 17th district. Deschutes, Crook and Jefferson counties would continue as the 17th district.

Umatilla, Union and Morrow would still have representation, of course. Umatilla now is a district in itself and is over-represented because it has one senator alone and shares a senator with Morrow and Union. Union already is in the joint Union-Wallowa district while Morrow can be added to another district without harm to its representation status.

• • • •

THE population figures of the areas involved in the proposed re-vamping plainly show the justice of Senator Cornett's plan.

There are eight counties of northeastern Oregon with a total population of 79,805, and with five state senators. The 17th district (Cornett's) has five counties with a population of 72,996 and one senator.

(The eight counties mentioned above are Baker, Gilliam, Morrow, Sherman, Umatilla, Union, Wallowa and Wheeler.)

This is an old story to the legislators down here at Salem. No reasonable person would deny the injustice of the situation and only unworthy political factors have prevented its remedy in past sessions.

Whether such forces will work again against just reapportionment remains to be seen, but Senator Cornett has been laboring vigorously to line up senate support for the measure.

That has taken time, which explains the reason why the proposal is coming out late in the session. The arguments are so clear in its favor that there should be no great loss of time in bringing it to issue. It is not a new complicated proposal, but rather one that everyone understands. Such bills have been before the legislature in past years.

• • • •

THE personal angle is the only real danger to the proposal. Eliminating a district means eliminating a senator, and there's the rub.

The senator representing the 19th district, which would be eliminated, is Rex Ellis of Pendleton. Last session it was the senators' clubby feelings for Mr. Ellis that defeated the same proposal. (It passed in the house of representatives but lost in the senate in 1943.)

This is the personal situation in regard to Mr. Ellis. His term expires before another session of the legislature. So also does the term of Senator Carl Engdahl of Pendleton, who represents the Umatilla district which would survive the proposed reapportionment.

So Mr. Ellis and Mr. Engdahl could both run for the Umatilla senate seat in 1946.

Hence, it is seen that the plan does not squeeze Senator Ellis out. He has to run anyhow if he wishes to return to the senate and there will be an opening in his home district.

• • • •

THIS is the principal matter of particular interest to Klamath county that is brewing down here in Salem where the legislature is struggling along toward the customary delayed adjournment.

There are a lot of Klamath people here in various capacities and Klamath's freshman representative, Rose Poole, was hostess at a most pleasant Klamath dinner Wednesday night. In the group was an ex-Klamath girl, Mrs. Faye Cornish Bush, now of Salem.

People from the high country always have a swell time when they get together any place.

Chairman, Traffic Safety Council

NINETY-EIGHT traffic accidents reported within the city limits of Klamath Falls thus far this year!

Is Klamath Falls just accepting this great loss of manpower and materials so vitally needed or are we doing something to combat this waste? The answer is, "Yes, we are doing what we can." The Klamath Falls traffic safety council is a committee appointed by the mayor and city council that endeavors through application of the three traffic safety "E's," education, engineering and enforcement to reduce the number of accidents.

Education through newspaper and radio publicity, safety campaigns, films, poster and pamphlet distribution.

Engineering by study and elimination of hazards, a tree obstructing visibility at a bad intersection is removed or trimmed, a jutting curbing is cut back, parking is restricted on a narrow street, street lighting is corrected, traffic signs are placed or removed.

Enforcement by recommendations to the city police that action be taken on violation of certain traffic laws. For instance, at present the pressure is on Mr. or Mrs. Klamath Falls who jaywalks to his car and then runs the first stop sign.

A complete record is kept by the city police department of all accidents, giving location, time, cause, age of driver, etc. These facts and figures are carefully analyzed by the committee along with monthly and annual reports.

This brief outline of the functions of the traffic safety council is set down here for the purpose of letting you, the residents of Klamath county, know that there is such a group organized, that it is your duty as a pedestrian or a driver in Klamath Falls to advise and recommend to this committee anything that you believe will improve our safety record.

So let's all think safety and make Klamath Falls the safest community in the nation. Bear in mind that life is but a short span at the most and you're a long time dead.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 23—No nation on the threshold of world victory could possibly be believed to be as discouraged, disheartened and confused as I find the people down this Atlantic seaboard.

A cold despair covers all walks and classes, all creeds and colors. No one anywhere seems to hope.

Disillusioned particularly are the youths with whom I have talked, including youths in the service, and the wives and families of servicemen, some of whom have lost their family heads in battle. They rather generally report of their own class:

"We are becoming a lost generation, without much faith of any kind or morals. How can it be otherwise? What is there to tie to?"

The poor man, rich man, business man and banker talk and act as if they are in the same boat.

I met one old negro above 50 years who had returned from employment in the Brooklyn navy yard, where, he said he received a wage of $52.50 a week. He was looking for work as a yardman, cutting grass and raking leaves, for which he insisted he must get $52.50 a week, not a nickel less.

When people who needed such work done pointed out to him, that his exorbitant demand was not only not justified by the type of work he would do, but also that skilled and educated labor was getting less, he rose in wrath:

"I must make a living, the same as you, and I will not work for less."

Confusion Pathetic

THE confusion among this class of workers is pathetic.

There are few remaining fabulously rich. Those few who formerly employed 40 servants now employ five. These are mostly elderly, or retired men and widows, living from trust funds from which the government may take two-thirds or more of their income in taxes.

Not many of the large winter homes of northerners have been opened this year, and those who have come south in droves, seem to have come for reasons of health. There is no joy anywhere, and no amusements except the same movies and bars they have at home.

Everywhere there is evident a feeling against the rich, fanned constantly by the current periodicals out of New York, which hold that the test of whether a man is fair and honest these days lies in the single factor of whether he denounces the rich. A revolutionist deception is being practised upon the people in this matter.

There will always be rich. If this class of former day rich are completely decimated, a new class will arise. If communism comes, those who are high in politics will be the rich.

Business men in the southern cities have asked me plaintively:

"What will become of Florida when the rich are destroyed completely?"

They forget the history of the rich. Revolutions never abolish riches, only change the class of those who are rich.

Before the Civil war, the southern planter and the New England mill owners were the rich of the country. Since then the southern planter has been poor. In more recent years the New England mill owner has become poor.

Then came the rich class from the west, from railroad building, lumber and gold. This class, also is now nearly extinct.

In the Coolidge-Hoover era we had business fortunes built up by the Fords, Dodges, Duponts, and also by the financial rich of New York. These fortunes continue only as they are productive, only if they can make fresh money from day to day in large quantities.

• • • •

Taxes Deflate Riches

UNDER present day taxes and regulations, a man must probably make $5,000,000 in order to keep $1,000,000 and he has no place to hide that in security, in view of the diminishing value of the dollar, rising prices, insecurity of investment in swiftly changing economic forces.

The rich of this war era also are a new class, the sparse type which can turn over money faster than the government can take it away—not the old established businesses which are limited by excess profits taxes, but people like Kaiser, the new shipyards and new industry owners not bound to the same extent as United States Steel and General Motors, for instance.

All except this new class of rich are as disillusioned and despairing as the worker in the war plants because their future carries no greater assurance. Most of them have bought farms in expectation of getting enough to eat anyway, when "the blow" falls.

Don't forget also there are rich in Russia. The favored politician there can live in castles, or get the best of everything there is available. The revolution there has also merely created a different class of preferred few, just as the French revolution destroyed the royal rich and created our current refugees and their fortunes.

The true test of whether riches are justified under capitalism is whether they produce for the common man—pay taxes which ease the burden of government, produce good jobs at good salaries under good working conditions. Only the bunk propagandists, or the fools who are deceived by them, want to destroy cows who can be made to produce good milk.

But you can see that anyone who has a dollar laid aside these days is a pessimist, noting inflation, taxes or prices constantly eating away the value of that dollar.

Few Nisei Plan to Return to Coast

PORTLAND, Feb. 23 (AP) — Few of the young Japanese-Americans released from relocation centers will return to the Pacific coast, a national YWCA staff member predicted here.

"There is little discrimination against them in the east, and they are going to be happy there," declared Esther Briesemeister, in charge of aiding young nisei discharged from the centers. Most of them told her they would head for the east or midwest, she reported.
