MIDWESTERN WHEAT FUTURES BOOSTED

PORTLAND, Feb. 26 (AP)—Midwestern wheat futures rose slightly last week, but the Portland cash wheat market remained quiet and unchanged, the war food administration (WFA) reported today.

Very dull trading reflected the continued skimpy demand at Pacific northwest terminals and small country offerings, the WFA said. Only 400 cars arrived at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals, 118 of the cars reaching Portland.

The WFA's weekly grain survey reported that the box car shortage was preventing northwest flour mills from completing milling mixtures. With the necessary wheat not arriving from Montana, some mills have already closed, the WFA said; and trade reports indicated a possible closure of others.

Midwest calls for northwest wheat were slack. California buyers limited demands to odd lots of high protein types.

United Points Out Savings In Time, Money Possible In Planned Klamath Service

How United Air Lines would provide high speed, trunk line passenger-mail-express schedules between Klamath Falls and other cities the length of its coast-to-coast and Pacific coast system was shown today in a brief filed by the company with the civil aeronautics board at Washington in support of its application to add 20 west coast cities to its system.

United contends that it is in a position to give Klamath Falls the most beneficial service and to do so more economically than any other airline applicants in the west coast case.

In its brief, United declares that "the 20 cities applied for can be served by United without creating any new routes. Only a minimum amount of additional flight mileage is required." It goes to point out that service can be given to Santa Rosa, Chico, Eureka, Klamath Falls, Chico, and Marshfield-North Bend by adding 43 flight miles between San Francisco and Portland.

"No other applicant in this proceeding can offer such a comprehensive plan for extended air service in such an economical fashion," says the brief. It also states that "from Klamath Falls to San Francisco there would be a saving of 75 miles over rail and 150 miles over bus. Nine hours and 20 minutes would be saved over the rail time and 14 hours and six minutes over the bus. There would be a saving in fare of $4.56 over rail."

United offers to these 20 proposed cities one-carrier service to 53 cities on its system which are located in areas having over 30 per cent of the population, retail sales and effective buying income of the country," the brief continues.

"United can provide this extensive coverage with a minimum amount of new mileage. United can do it without creating new routes, without duplicating existing routes and without duplicating existing facilities. It can do this without requiring government subsidy. The cities which United proposes to serve will support air service. Economic self-sufficiency and independence from government subsidy is an important element in selecting proposed cities and must be considered in appraising the need for new air service."

"In contrast to United's program, proposals of the feeder applicants and Western Air Lines involve the creation of a great number of new routes and new route miles, the duplication of existing routes, the duplication of existing services and facilities, and much greater cost to the public."

"No amount of argument can change the fact that United already is established in the major terminal and intermediate cities between which the proposed cities are located. This fact clearly and indisputably places United in a position where it can render the service more economically than can any other applicant. It also places United in a position where it can benefit to the fullest extent from all of the traffic generating ability of the proposed cities by carrying traffic over its system beyond the local terminal and, in doing so, will be rendering a more complete service than can any of the other applicants. Schedules already in operation or which will be in operation can be used to serve the proposed cities."

JUVENILES FOUND BEHIND DAVENPORT

Two juvenile boys, 12 and 13-year-old brothers, were found hiding behind a davenport at the Luther Haskins ranch home near Merrill Saturday night, after they allegedly had stolen from the house two cartons of cigarettes, one quart jar half full of coins, watches and other articles.

The pair is being held in the juvenile cottage at the county infirmary after having been turned over to County Juvenile Officer Harold Hendrickson by state police.

The boys are said to have entered the Haskins home while the owners were absent Saturday evening. They then returned later after the Haskins were in bed, claiming that they intended to replace some of the loot. Haskins found the boys behind the davenport when he entered the living room in an effort to locate a noise. All of the articles said taken were recovered with the exception of the cigarettes.

The juvenile office here said the two were sons of a Merrill agricultural worker and had been in this vicinity for about three months.
