relaxed TOO SOON after the end of the war the result will be a condition of semi-chaos that will make what happened after the last war look like a dust devil as compared to a cyclone.

The reason is quite simple: The normal relationship of supply and demand has been ARTIFICIALLY upset by the war. As long as this artificial upset continues, we must maintain the artificial controls.

Otherwise there will be trouble. . . .

THAT is an abstruse subject. Let's see if we can make it plainer by simple illustration. When two children get on a teeter-totter, they establish a balance in the course of time by the artificial and carefully controlled process of moving back and forth along the board—the heavier child moving closer to the center and the lighter one farther out toward the end.

LAKEVIEW STUDIES HOUSING SHORTAGE

LAKEVIEW—That there is a definite need for additional housing facilities in Lakeview was the consensus of opinion of a group of mill operators and businessmen, who are going to make application to the national housing administration for a housing project here.

Because of the dire need of housing facilities in Lakeview it is felt that many needed workers by-pass the town and as a result essential industries in the town and county are operating short-handed.

NHA has recently allotted a number of new homes to other eastern Oregon cities, such as Pendleton, John Day, Pilot Rock and Ontario.

It is believed that when the investigation is held by the war manpower commission to determine if the need is great enough here to support or allow a housing project, the evidence supplied would be great enough to get the NHA's okay.
