News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Mr. Roosevelt's rebuff by congress on the draft-for-work bill is growing complete and overwhelming.

Only one New Deal senator—just one—supported him (Maybank of South Carolina) on the crucial test vote, unless you count Leader Barkley, whose job requires him to lead in whatever direction pointed.

Such ardent Rooseveltian supporters as Guffey and Pepper ran to the mild voluntary manpower substitute which everyone agrees is not much of a manpower plan.

How did it happen to stand with him in the first place and pass the stronger May-Bailey bill? Well, the bill was promoted by the house military affairs committee which will do whatever the army wants ordinarily.

It was rammed through the house because our army was not yet out of the hole caused by the German break-through, and Speaker Rayburn made support of the war department in this matter an issue of emotional prestige for the president who was then absent abroad.

Even then Rayburn had only a 10-man margin for compulsion against one of the substitute plans.

It is quite clear now that the house is caving in and in any event Mr. Roosevelt cannot get a labor draft in any form; furthermore, he must take approximately the weak senate plan or nothing.

Primary Cause TO attribute his defeat to the CIO, however, is ridiculous. I believe the primary cause was this:

The army admittedly made a mistake when it expected the end of the war last year and began retrenching on production. In dismay it went to the opposite extreme and since then has been working on the officially announced basis that the war will never be over, and is constantly expanding its demands, (recently steel, aluminum, zinc, etc.)

At least they are following this policy in general, although I hear some private talk of individual and secret cutbacks beginning in certain lines, which they do not want made public.

But the average congressman is convinced the war in Europe should be over between April 15 and June 30. Manpower McNutt dutifully testified for the boss (the president has done all he could to win this fight for the army and himself) that there would be no retrenchment on V-E day, but everyone expects it must come the day after, in a great many lines at least.

Furthermore, the president, army, McNutt and others failed to make out a case of a national crisis on labor, warranting such a drastic departure from democratic processes. There are supposed to be some 67,000,000 people working now. No official ever claimed the shortage was more than 170,000 to 200,000 workers.

And there were many answers offered to those figures. The shortages were in standard wage industries, in certain localities, in special industries.

Greater Deterrent PROBABLY a greater deterrent to war production was the union and money conditions. Union-fixed quotas in many war plants, limiting production. Workers who could make big money, all they could spend, working four or five days a week, just would not work longer.

The Mead committee got this evidence out of its Detroit investigation, if any evidence of such an obvious general condition was needed. Yet we are supplying the world.

I think a fair, objective verdict on the months of debate and conflicting evidence would hold that the manpower shortage was limited and that the condition did not come anywhere near justifying a draft.

Not even the prestige and unparalleled power of the president could overcome these facts and they could not be entirely obliterated by the official great administration publicity campaign. Indeed the only effective argument for the bill was that the president wanted it because he thought it would be popular with the soldiers, but that did not go in the senate, and is now falling in the house.

I wish I could report this as a great triumph for democratic processes—a victory for the voluntary way over the compulsory direction of citizens as the masses—but that is the effect, rather than the cause.

HIGH school youngsters who are plugging for a teen-age club have encountered a lot of adult procrastination, side-stepping, evasion and the stuff commonly known as red tape.

EPLEY

At a meeting the other night, a little high school girl sat through a long adult discussion of this matter. Nearly everybody present, of course, disclaimed authority to act at the moment, and there was the usual sparring and "feeling out" that goes on among representatives of various organizations asked to part from a few shekels.

Let's Get Action AMONG groups represented at the session was the city recreation committee, which, because it is sitting on about $18,000 in reserves, is subject to frequent pressure for funds.

Check 'Em AS you walk down Main street, take a gander at the tires of the cars you pass, and well wagger you'll find that at least two tires per car, on the average, need re-capping.

TEMPLE CONTINUES EVANGELISTIC MEET

Evangelistic services at Klamath Temple, 1007 Pine, are continuing another week, with the Mark Hinman evangelists. Rev. Hinman will preach Sunday morning on the subject, "A Great Spiritual Feast," and at 7:45 on the subject "Will Russia Fight Japan?" a prophetic message on Russia's postwar role.

Services at the temple are held nightly at 7:45 except Monday and Saturday. Prior to each evening service at 7 o'clock, a "Deeper Life" service is held with Rev. Hinman giving Bible lessons about the ministry of the holy spirit. The public is cordially invited to attend.

TWO PERFORMANCES SET FOR CONCERT

The public is getting a break next week when the annual spring concert given by the music department of the Klamath Union high school, will be presented on two evenings, Thursday and Friday, March 22 and 23. Instead of the usual one night performance, the school has arranged the usual splendid program. The band will be heard in a descriptive fantasy based on the well known tune, "Stormy Weather," and the orchestra will be heard in Morton Gould's "Hillbilly."

Obedience Is Better Than Sacrifice
Since God, Christ, and the apostles have all failed to teach or command us to celebrate the Passover (Easter) we conclude that it ended at the cross with all the rest of the Jewish law. The entire law was taken out of the way and nailed to the cross. (Col. 2:14).

It is practiced today because it appeals to men and not because it is pleasing to God. The Lord would much rather we obey His commandments than that we try to worship Him in a way He has not authorized.

Saul wanted to worship the Lord in his own way, but Samuel said, "Hath Jehovah as great delight in burnt-offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of Jehovah? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. Because thou hast rejected the word of Jehovah, he hath also rejected thee from being king." (I Samuel 15:22, 23).
