It will take another day to finish the building improvements started by members of the East Side grange last Tuesday. The job turned out to be more of an undertaking than was at first anticipated. Finishing touches were supposed to have been given the work on Wednesday or Friday. Since it appeared quite stormy Wednesday morning it looks as though Friday will be the choice. New linoleum was also glued to table tops in the grange hall kitchen after the women folks had prepared a nice dinner for the workers Tuesday noon.

The public is cordially invited to attend and help give the girls a big boost with their work. The main object of the benefit is to raise money for uniforms. Coffee and doughnuts will be available for those who wish a sweet snack along with their dancing.

Jay and family, who recently moved into the George Schamel house not long since occupied by Mrs. Cora Cook, plan to move to Alturas soon, where more work than usual has been created by the advent of new mill installations there.

Saturday evening. During the lecturer's program hour the time will be taken up measuring and weighing members for their grange Red Cross donation. A social hour of dancing will follow the supper which will be held immediately after the weighing and measuring.
