Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

If a new navy installation is located at Klamath Falls (final decision has not yet been announced) a large housing project will go right along with it. Assurances to that effect have been given the chamber of commerce and local officials. The navy is well aware of the housing situation here and will meet a new influx with housing projects totaling 600 units or more.

EPLEY

Local attitude toward the proposed installation seems to be to let the navy do the deciding on merit. If the navy decides this is the best location for the installation, Klamath will do its level best to make it a success through local cooperation, as has been the case with other installations here.

Not a Re-Routing

PACIFIC Highway association has called a meeting for April 25 at Medford to consider the proposed routing of the inter-regional highway by way of Klamath Falls from Eugene to Weed, rather than by way of Medford. Communities along the Pacific from south of Eugene, to Weed, are naturally interested in seeing that that route gets proper consideration.

So far as we are concerned, we are certain the facts favor the Klamath Falls route for the "through" highway, which is the inter-regional route. But we think the Pacific highway should be developed to the best possible state highway standards to serve the communities along the Pacific and to give them adequate highway connections both north and south.

Some sloppy work has shown up in the state press in connection with this matter. The proposal before the highway commission has been referred in the press as a "re-routing," which is, of course, in error because the routing of the inter-regional has not yet been decided. One amusing error, which appeared in Portland papers, was that the proposal was for "re-routing the Coast highway." It looks as if a lot of Oregon newspaper men ought to get out their maps and get this thing clear in their heads.

This sensible proposal is for the inter-regional highway to leave the present Pacific highway at Goshen, south of Eugene, come over the Willamette to No. 97 at Chemult, and down No. 97 to Weed, Calif., where it rejoins the old Pacific. That routing admirably serves the declared purpose of the inter-regional highway. It is shorter, faster, less costly to build and to travel, and has many other advantages.

New and Old Together

OUR old friend, Charley Stanton, of the Roseburg News-Review, makes some interesting comments on the Harper's Magazine story which said that Klamath Falls demonstrates the "American capacity for achieving dilapidation without antiquity," discussed at length here a few days ago.

After reporting our own remarks, Charley adds this interesting comment: "As 'Mac' Epley points out, our towns have been carved out of the sagebrush or the forests for only a comparatively few years and, as we have made improvements, we have neglected to bring into conformity the existing or older properties.

"We can, for instance, from the window beside our desk, look out upon business properties in Roseburg that haven't had a coat of paint for 20 years. We can see broken windows in vacant, upstairs rooms. We can even see last year's circus posters and signs of firms that have been dead and gone these many years. And all this intermingled with beautiful and thoroughly modern, completely new structures, well-tended and glistening in their freshness.

"New businesses are springing up daily in Roseburg and as each comes out in new dress, it serves to emphasize the dilapidation surrounding it.

"Harper's reporter came from the east, where dilapidation is common and uniform, where coal soot lends a color similarity. In the majority of the eastern cities we have seen there is little to draw distinction between the old and the new. In fact, the old predominates in the impression one gains.

"But here in the west, where the old and the new are intermingled, the contrast is striking indeed and lends itself easily to the description of 'achieving dilapidation without achieving antiquity.'

"A new patch on an old pair of pants is conspicuous, but a uniformly shabby suit tends to obscurity."

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie
Associated Press War Analyst

WITH the mighty Russian battle-front again surging forward the strategy to follow junction of Moscowites with western allies becomes the question of the day.

The reich is slashed in two—what then, we remain in much the same position forecast by General Eisenhower and his commanders within the last few days. That is to say, there still are a lot of isolated pockets of Germans to clear up. In short no man can put his finger on the calendar and say: "This is the date of V-E day."

That's a keen disappointment to a lot of home-front folk who jumped to the conclusion, from the dazzling speed of the allied tank columns, that the war was over. However, we shall do well to swallow this strong mustard and make up our minds that there's still some distance to go.

No Sign of Surrender

OF course, if Hitler should suddenly change his mind and decide to surrender as head of government, that presumably would end all German resistance. However, up to now he and his lieutenants have shown every sign of fighting to the end and there is no other body of Germans who could speak for the many pockets of resistance in the matter of surrender. So we must continue cleaning house.

With the enemy divided into two zones the southern theater will comprise Hitler's fortress in the Bavarian Alps near his Berchtesgaden home, the northern will be made up of large pockets along the coast clear to Norway.

Have Advantage

WE must link Hitler's last stand in the Alps with that of the German army which is fighting in northern Italy. The allied forces on the peninsula are now in the full swing of an offensive to annihilate the Hitlerites. However, the latter have a strong force—some 25 German divisions and about five Italian divisions—and the advantage of terrain which is cut by numerous rivers. I should say we have here the prospects of a tough and bloody battle.

Now as to the German stand in the far north: There is no doubt that the nazis intend to defend the capital so long as possible—not an enviable task in view of the way the allies are closing in on both sides and are threatening to cut the German corridor previously mentioned. When the capital succumbs, the defenders will do their best to retreat to one of the pockets on the north coast. The measure of their success is highly problematical, because the Russians are driving hard to cut the German line above Berlin and thus surround the forces holding the capital.

Soldier Kills Nazi, Finds Own Letter

HEADQUARTERS 15TH ARMY GROUP IN ITALY, April 21 (AP)—Staff Sgt. Cameron E. Butte of Astoria, Ore., reported today how he killed a German soldier yesterday and searching him found a letter in the dead Nazi's pocket addressed to Staff Sgt. Cameron E. Butte.

"The letter was from my grandmother," Butte related, "and I learned later from the mail clerk that he gave the letter to a buddy of mine and asked him to deliver it. My buddy is missing in action. The German either killed or captured him and stole the letter as a souvenir."

ACHTUNG, ADOLF
TOPEKA, Kas., April 21 (AP)—The Germans may be supermen but they apparently aren't very tall.

Lt. Nels A. Anderson Jr., six foot, one inch lieutenant, wrote his parents here that he looked all over Germany while with the first army and still hadn't found a bed long enough for him.

Market Quotations

NEW YORK, April 21 (AP)—Individual stock prices, notably falls, persisted in today's final market of a generally up-swinging week but profit cashing continued to put brakes on the climbing propensities of many leaders. While gainers of fractions to a point were plentiful near the close, minus signs were well distributed. Transfers for the two hours were around 800,000 shares.

In front most of the session were Pere Marquette, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, International Telephone, Bethlehem, Hudson Motors, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, General Electric and National Power & Light. Occasional stragglers were Boeing, Glenn Martin, International Harvester, Goodrich and Union Carbide.

Assorted rail bonds advanced. Commodities were uneven.

Telling The Editor

Letters printed here must not be more than 500 words in length, must be written legibly on ONE SIDE of the paper only, and must be signed. Contributions following these rules, are warmly welcomed.

OUR LEADER IS DEAD TONIGHT

Our leader is dead tonight
Though in time of war
He had to go away
To that place called heaven.
To rest an eternity in heaven.
He has died, it is sad.

Our leader has died tonight.
He was great in his day.
Now someone else will take his place.
He may be as great.
As our leader before him stood.
Our leader is dead tonight.

The world is sad and quiet,
But in heaven it is happy and quiet.
May God only lead us,
And guide us, help us,
Keep us as you have before
Our leader died on earth tonight.
Marian Louise Hosler—Age 12
Riverside school.

CARRY ON

Though he's fallen
He's still standing,
And his smile is smiling on,
Like a flag
Above the battle
We seem to hear his "Carry On."

Hear it whisper
Midst the droning
Of the flaming cannon's roar.
Seems to give
New life and courage
To the tired aged weary, sore.

Oh, dear God
Who shines above us,
Thou who knows each right and wrong,
Give us faith
To look before us
Put within our hearts a song.

For we need
Thy love and guidance
As we lay the Old away.
Lay the tired
And battered banner
That has fallen midst the fray.

Now a new one
Flies above us,
Give him faith to lead us on,
Visioning
The old before us
Hand uplifted, "Carry On."
Mrs. Leon Lybrand.

SAY NOT THAT HE IS DEAD

Say not that he is dead who day by day
Looked at the future with a cheerful soul;
The road gets better as it nears its goal.
Who loved the flowers, the mountains and the sky,
Who laughed with little children in their glee,
A happy, loving spirit cannot die.
Say not that he is dead, who lived and thought,
Who served the people with a kindly wit,
Whose face the sun from hill eternal caught,
Who treasured things immortal in his heart.
Life may be silent and hands laid to rest,
Feet ceased their journey over land and sea,
But life itself goes on through change and test,
Say not that he is dead, it cannot be.

TULELAKE COUNCIL PLANS CITY PARK

TULELAKE — City fathers of Tulelake, with the pledged support of the Tulelake Rotary club, plan an extensive community improvement project on land set aside for a city park when the city was incorporated. The area lies on the west side of town and was used last year as site for a camp for German prisoners of war.

The club asked city approval of a park commission and R. M. Prior, president of the Rotary club, Dick Moore, city councilman and Ival Wolfe were appointed to serve in that capacity. The commission conferred Thursday with Sheldon Brumbaugh, Klamath Falls architect who will construct a model for the proposed recreational ground.

The park area is one block square and some time ago the Tulelake 20-30 club then active, sponsored an improvement program that because of lack of funds was not carried to completion.

The council has accepted the resignation of Mr. Thaler, city police judge who is farming this year in the Tulelake community. As yet his successor has not been appointed.

The council authorized also, purchase of a dump truck for disposal of garbage.

Mayor Clarence Schott and Councilmen Ralph Fausett, Al Porter, Dick Moore and Arthur Prince were present for the last meeting.

Visit Ends—Pvt. and Mrs. Beverly Thomas left Wednesday for Spokane where they will visit for a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parvins. They have been with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas of 2105 Wantland for two weeks, and he is to report to McCaw General hospital, Walla Walla, April 26. Pvt. Thomas is on sick leave because of an injury incurred in France last fall.

From South—Mrs. Richard Maxwell, (Alice Mae Cornforth), and daughter Bonnie are here for the duration with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cornforth, 2135 Ward. Maxwell, who serves as chief petty officer, U. S. navy, will leave Sunday to report for duty. The family has been living in San Francisco while Cornforth was stationed at Treasure Island.
