

OUTLET DRAIN CONSTRUCTION UNDERWAY NOW

Construction on the Klamath outlet drain is advancing rapidly to schedule. E. Laton is in charge of the reclamation work. The drain, estimated at a cost of $1,000,000 will provide an outlet for the ponded water on the Klamath side of Lower Klamath lake, and excess waters from Tule lake. The drain is 11 miles in length, the main line has a capacity of 200 feet per second, and follow the center of the original drain. It will extend north until it reaches the old Klamath outlet channel. There pumping station will lift the water into the drain. The drain will follow the old channel to a point east of the highway at just east of the highway at the center of the original drain.

The drain will be constructed in three 48-inch concrete pipes and under the SP railroad embankment. The three 54-inch corrugated metal pipes will be jacked through the embankment. The drain will parallel the south side of the Klamath river, discharging into the Klamath river at a point south of the outlet. The drain will be located so as to provide an outlet for the excess and drainage water, independent of the Klamath drainage district irrigation system.

George R. Stacey has the contract for the drain excavation. He has one draging machine now in this work. The Tru Mix Concrete company has the contract for the construction of the two pumping plants, two crossings of the Klamath drainage district canals, the highway and railroad crossings. The contractor has let the preliminary work including shops and storage facilities and now has a line excavator engaged in grading for the Klamath drainage district south canal.

It is planned to complete the drain straits jobs late this year so that the entire system be placed in operation when the early next year. The Tule lake area, work including the drainage and pumping systems is in progress. Clifford A. Dunn, local contractor, has completed the section of pumping plants and "B", and is now engaged in constructing plant "C". Pumping units will provide irrigation and drainage for lands in the Copsey area and the sump area of the Great Northern railroad now being leased.

McNary Farms, lessees of 3800 acres of Tule lake sump land that lie under water, have completed a five and one-half mile long dike, drained the area and are engaged in preparing the land for crop. During the summer they plan to complete the dike. The work performed by lessees includes the construction of a one and one-half miles long channel to connect the water area in the south of the dike, where excess water is pumped to Klamath lake. This work was completed last week. Plans and data for a lateral drainage system for the Copsey area in Tule lake have been prepared and are now in the engineer's office at Medford. Where final plans and specifications for the construction of the works by contract prepared.

Smooth Sailing

A railroad's roadbed has a lot to do with travel comfort. A well-built roadbed does away with annoying, sleep-disturbing bumps... like a boat breasting a choppy sea. It gives you "smooth sailing."

The kind of gravel used for roadbed ballast is an important factor. Union Pacific uses a special, sturdy type of crushed granite which stands up particularly well under wartime's heavily loaded freight and passenger trains. Then, too, it acts as a "cushion," resulting in more comfortable riding and less wear on locomotives and cars.

Thus, even the ballast used on the railroad's roadbed plays its part in the efficient, 'round-the-clock transportation of troops and essential battle-line freight over Union Pacific's Strategic Middle Route, uniting the East with the Pacific Coast.

Future "smooth sailing" over life's highway can be assured by holding tight to the war bonds we now have... and, as an extra measure of economic protection, buying as many more as we can possibly afford.
