The collage consists of three distinct parts. On the left is a cartoon of a man with wild hair and a mustache, shouting with his mouth wide open. Below him is a handwritten note that reads: "only portraits but it we could get Wash~". To the right of this is a newspaper clipping from the "Herald-Examiner" dated May 9, 1957. The headline reads "AFL Gives Teamsters Cannery Jurisdiction". The article text states: "WASHINGTON, May 9 (AP)—Full jurisdiction over all cannery workers in Washington, Oregon and California has been granted by the American Federation of Labor to the Teamster union, David Beck, Washington state director of the AFL Teamsters union, said today." On the right side of the collage is another cartoon showing three men in military-style uniforms. Two of them are looking at a document held by the third man, who is speaking. A speech bubble above him contains the word "AUGUST".

Beck said the resolution which affects some 80,000 workers, supplemented action taken in Miami in February giving teamsters control only over warehousemen.

jurisdiction over all warehousemen had been conferred upon a west coast cannery workers council, embracing more than 35 federal labor union locals on the coast. Approximately 20 of these locals already have made application for affiliation with the teamsters, Beck said.
