News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10 — Mr. Truman started hewing a new path of his own in his first forward action on domestic affairs. He slashed nearly four billion dollars from the war expenditures program, and vetoed farm draft deferment (Tydings amendment).

Sour On Veto

THE draft deferment veto, on the other hand, left congress sour. The inside explanation for the president's action was that his veto message had been composed, or wholly inspired, by the war department. The legislation was in the form of a Tydings resolution designed to compel the administration to enforce the original Tydings farm deferment law already on the statute books.

The same suppressed congressional criticism greeted a statement issued by the president backing up OPA, and apparently composed by OPA Administrator Bowles. The congressmen feel Mr. Truman took the word of his departments too much at face value rather than striking out for himself.

Large Calling List

HIS calling list is large, running about 18 a day, in contrast to the little known office practice of the last year or so of the Roosevelt administration when there were few callers. Several senators have told me that for a year before Mr. Roosevelt's death it was virtually impossible to see him.

Other senatorial callers report he has a slightly different position from Mr. Roosevelt also on the "little TVA" watersheds. They reported him favoring the development of the Missouri valley and other projects on a common sense plan, but apparently he is not much for slogans and high pressure political salesmanship.

He will, of course, have his troubles, but every inside report from Washington supports the above balanced appraisal of his first few weeks.

"I'll be catcher because I've got to watch my little brother — he can sit behind home plate and learn a lot about baseball watching me!"

Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY KLAMATH'S easy accessibility to ten or more of the northern counties of California was one of the reasons this city was selected as a site for a national cemetery.

EPLEY

Portland and Klamath Falls were the Oregon cities selected. Portland was an obvious choice, because it is near the center of the state's population. Klamath was chosen because of its transportation connections with other parts of the state and with the northern California district.

Ignored

IN a discussion of highway matters in connection with its espousal of the Pacific highway route for the inter-regional route, the Siskiyou News of Yreka completely ignores the interests of the rich Tulelake area of Siskiyou county.

Commenting on the inter-regional alternatives, the News mentions only Dorris as being affected by the decision to be made by highway authorities. It overlooks the fact that Tulelake is a part of the Klamath basin, which is interested as an economic and geographic unit, and further than a major offshoot from the proposed Klamath inter-regional is the Portland-Klamath-Reno-Los Angeles route which passes through the city of Tulelake.

The narrow viewpoint of the News in this connection is quite characteristic of the attitude of many people in the valleys of southern Oregon and in the Yreka area, who have never quite understood what has been happening in the areas east of them. And some of them, when they have realized it, have betrayed a foolish jealousy about it all.

Economic development and population growth east of the southern Cascades, in Oregon and in northeastern California, came in recent years as compared with the settlements in the Rogue valley and in western Siskiyou county. But it is firm and substantial, and the interests of all would be better served if our neighbors on the west would become better acquainted with us and start working with us instead of against us.

Full Stop

KLAMATH police want local motorists to come to a full stop at stop streets. We know, because we personally received a firm warning this morning.

Coming down to the office with a couple of youngsters who were afraid they might be late to school, we apparently pulled up to one of those rolling stops where the driver makes sure the street is clear and then goes ahead. The police don't go for that. They were somewhere behind us in the paddy wagon, and they chased us down to tell us courteously that we were technically in error.

We're stopping, hereafter, and passing the word along to others who don't like the sound of a siren right behind them.

A. B. Cain, editor of the Alaska Catholic, published in Juneau, Alaska, arrived in Klamath Falls on Wednesday for a visit with his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Tighe. On Friday evening, Cain will show colored motion pictures of Alaska in the parish hall of Sacred Heart church under the auspices of the church.

The pictures show many points of interest, and include views of Alaskan flowers and vegetation, farming in Matanuska and Fairbanks, fishing and wildlife, glaciers, scenes along the Richardson highway, dog team races and winter sports, Eskimos in their blanket tossing game and in a ceremonial dance, scenes of the shrine of Saint Terese, and views of the many Alaskan communities.

Pictures are also being shown of the ark of Juneau, bearing Mr. and Mrs. Satko as they landed in Juneau in their homemade boat which sailed under its own power from Tacoma, Wash., to Alaska.

On his trip to this country, Cain has been showing his pictures in the Puget Sound area and in the Willamette valley. He was a member of the house of representatives in the 1945 session.

While in Klamath Falls, Cain has had the pleasure of meeting a genuine "sourdough," Charles Blackman, who has spent several years in the north.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Vorce left last week for Grants Pass after spending the winter months with their daughter, Helen Noble and family.

Mrs. Floyd Stewart and children, and Mrs. Orval Havalina and children spent Sunday with their brother, Bill Burnett and family.

Charles Partridge received word that his brother-in-law, Gerald Charlesworth was killed in action on April 10 in the South Pacific. Mrs. Charlesworth, the former Marian Partridge, spent several summers in Langell valley and her many friends extend sympathy.

Rev. Wayne Johnston and son Paul, arrived recently from Ahasaka, Ida. Rev. Johnston is the new minister at the Full Gospel church.

Sincere sympathy of the valley is extended to Don Schooler and the Jerry McCarty family in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. John McFall has returned home after spending a week at the Owen People home. Mrs. McFall is improving after an attack of pneumonia. PFC Jack McFall of Treasure Island spent a short furlough with his parents during his mother's illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Card of Wyoming, are visiting their daughter and family, the Chris Hoods.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Dearborn and family and Mrs. Ruby Brown visited last Sunday at Bly with the Herb Johnsons.

Mrs. Ella Roads left Monday for Portland after spending the past year with her son, Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Gale have returned home after spending the winter months at Phoenix, Ariz.

Mr. and Mrs. Billie DeVaul have moved to their recently completed home. They have been guests of their son Orville and family.

Mrs. Mike Dearborn and son spent Monday with Mrs. Cora Leavitt and children. Mrs. Lloyd Gift was an afternoon visitor. Mrs. Mary Leidy and Mrs. Mary Dearborn were Friday visitors at the Leavitt home.

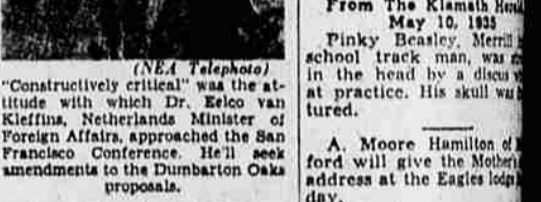

Mrs. Bob Dalton and baby daughter, Evelyn Marie, are home from Klamath Valley hospital.
