RAFFETTO SPEAKS ON PRISON LIFE

First Lt. John A. Raffetto Jr., escaped prisoner of war of the Germans, addressed the members of the Lions club at their meeting on Tuesday afternoon. Raffetto told of his experiences since his capture in February, 1944, and gave an account of conditions existing during the year that he was a prisoner of the German government, at which time he was placed in Italy, Germany and Poland.

Raffetto stated that the food was better than at most camps of this type, and that all the prisoners were well treated, particularly by the military authorities. However, if the Wehrmacht or the SS troops had had their way, much stricter discipline would have been enforced. He went on to say that his camp was exclusively for officers and that the same discipline was used as in our own armed forces. The commander of the camp, also a prisoner of war, was a colonel.

Sports were enjoyed by the men, including volleyball, football and baseball, and equipment was furnished by the YMCA of Sweden. A library was also organized by the men, with books supplied by the Swedish organization. Plays were put on from time to time, and entertainment was furnished by a symphony orchestra and swing band which were made up of the men at that camp.

The prisoners of war were not forced into labor battalions as has been the case in many German concentration camps. In this respect, the German officials observed the Geneva convention.

Guests at the meeting included Major Denton J. Rees, Capt.

Joe Smith, PFC Harold Perkins, Bill Kunz and Roy Preme. Don Gillespie was introduced as a new member, with Vern Owens as the chairman of the day.
