

Rubinoff Concert Week's Highlight

A combination of sweet violin music, the splendidly trained voices of the cappella choir, and the superb accompaniment of piano artist, resulted in an evening of gaiety last Thursday at Rubinoff concert at the Pelican.

Rubinoff, who appeared here four years ago, has quite a following in this city and the Lions club should be complimented sponsoring his concert again.

The appreciative audience was grateful to him for the high note paid Director Andrew G. Rubinoff and the Klamath Union school robed a cappella choir which sang to perfection during the evening.

Although Rubinoff played a number of classical numbers, the up of really tickled toes and feet to tapping were his own interpretations of "Don't Let Me Be This Way in August" and "Don't Let Me Be This Way in August." Rubinoff's own manner of playing a classical number, was well exhibited in "Tango Trigane."

Alexander Makofka was one of the finest accompanists, as well as an artist in his own right to play before Klamath audiences in a long, long time.

Highlight of his performance was de Falla's "Ritual Fire Dance," the a cappella choir usual, the bell in the finest-in-class. There were a number of changes as it may seem, who heard this group of not girls from our high school and they probably thought that the praises sung in honor were done as a matter of course. They learned to really are, and evidence of applause given Rubinoff in praise of the choir, showed appreciation of someone who is on their own opinion.
