FORMER MARINES UNITE IN OREGON

Three marines of World War I were reunited when Darrell Gardner, Arizona copperminer, visited Oregon last week.

Gardner, assistant general manager of the Magna Copper company, Arizona, on business in Oregon, met Hollis Huntington in Salem, who used to be in the marine corps with him in 1917. They were stationed at Mare Island, and played on the same football team.

Through Huntington, Gardner learned that another marine buddy, Keith Ambrose, lived in Klamath Falls. When Gardner arrived here he looked up Fire Chief Ambrose, who had played half on the marine football team. Gardner played end.

Gardner said Ambrose had changed little in the 28 years. They relived old games played in the Rose Bowl, where the Camp Lewis team was the only one that ever scored against them.

The three buddies were separated when they received their transfers. Gardner was sent to camp in Florida and Ambrose went to officers training.

Mrs. Gardner accompanied her husband on the trip to Oregon. They left Sunday to return to Arizona.

MEET THE CARRIERS

Malcolm Van Meter of 848 Owens, started carrying papers for The Herald and News in 1942, when he was 13 years old.

In the three years that Mac has carried his route, he has earned approximately $2000 at $80 a month. He has $600 in savings and bonds, in addition to having purchased his own school clothes, books, and paid for his amusements during that time.

He is giving up his route the first of June to take a well earned vacation in Idaho and San Francisco, and his route is open for another boy who would like to tie his three-year record.

The carriers of The Herald and News work on the "little merchant" plan, used by most of the country's daily newspapers. This plan gives any boy good business training, for it is an education in politeness, aggressiveness, psychology, bookkeeping, promptness, and many other necessary qualities.

New Analgesic Tablet (Pain Relief) now released to public

Thousands find it gives quicker, safe relief from headache—from pains of sinus, neuritis, neuralgia and arthritis

FOR MANY YEARS aspirin has been accepted by both the medical profession and the public as a safe, sure way to relieve pain. But many people who had complete confidence in aspirin did not find it gave as quick relief from blinding, maddening pain as they hoped for. Hence in desperation they sometimes turned to other remedies less well proved.

To meet this situation a group of medical research men set out to see what could be done to speed up the analgesic or "pain-killing" action of aspirin—to make it bring their patients quicker relief, without heart or stomach upset.

Out of these researches came a really new kind of analgesic tablet, a combination of aspirin and calcium glutamate. In this new tablet, aspirin does its old, safe job of relieving pain. But through its combination with calcium glutamate, extensive tests by physicians showed it gave most people both quicker relief and greater relief from pain.

After this extensive testing and use by members of the medical profession as a prescription remedy, this new analgesic tablet has now been released for non-prescription sale by every druggist. It is called Superin (from super-aspirin). You can get its blessed, quick relief from pain by asking your druggist for a bottle today—30 tablets for 39¢. Ask for Superin—Superin.
