Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY
FRIDAY'S special election will probably bring out one of the smallest votes in years in Oregon.

This election lacks oomph. It is devoted entirely to measures. Measures, lacking flesh and blood, have to be pretty hot controversially to get out the vote.

EPLEY
This bill releases available funds for needed buildings for the state institutions, and there hasn't been much argument about it.

There is more chance for dispute over the other state measure—a 2 1/2 cents-per-pack tax on cigarettes to provide new money for public high and grade schools.

Good Idea For Citizens

ONE advantage of a special election of this nature, with only two state measures on the ballot, is that most of all those who do go to the polls will know something about the measures.

Sound City Measure

A CITY measure which we think should pass is a charter amendment which will change the method of filling vacancies in elective office of the city.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON
WASHINGTON, June 18—The Chinese accounts have been daily describing how they are "fighting their way forward."

There have been FEW chinks in Bushido up to now.

THE Jap jab shots do seem to place a lot of reliance in suicide warfare. In his recent speech to the Jap stogie parliament, Suzuki said:

THESE wholesale confessions in Russian trials have always had us Americans stumped. But the trials and their outcome make it reasonably apparent that the Russians are going through with their contention that the London Poles are anti-soviet, even to the extent of conspiring to thwart Russian military success.

Youth Seriously Hurt In Accident

PORTLAND, June 18 (AP)—Norman D. Hoover, 17, was seriously injured and eight other persons lacerated in a collision of two cars here yesterday.

Tululake Man Hurt In Fall From Truck

John Anderson of Tululake suffered facial and arm bruises Saturday when he lost his balance and fell out of the back of a pickup truck in which he was riding, according to an accident report submitted by Otto Haynes, also of Tululake and driver of the truck.

accurate way would relate that the Japs are giving up central and southern China.

This strategic Jap retreat is tremendously important to us. It means they are drawing back their vast numbers for a final stand of the war against our massing power.

My information is they will retire all the way back to the Yangtze river and Shanghai, there to establish an emperor's line, or whatever they choose to call it. South of the line they will hold only the China ports with suicide squads (as Hitler did in France).

Unquestionably they will try to hold Hongkong, Swatow and Amoy and possibly other points—just to prevent us from using these needed bases for Asiatic operations.

This is what General Stilwell knew when he started talking in print the other day about the war lasting two years. He does not apparently expect bombing will bring surrender earlier, or anticipate that business leaders will take over the Tokyo government and seek peace.

In case the Japs fight to the last, we will have to go in and clean them out in China as well as upon the mainland—and there are many who suspect their fight for Manchuria will be bigger than in behalf of their mainland.

Perhaps Two Million Men

ESTIMATES of their troops in North China (including those retreating northward) run as high as 2,000,000 men compared with 1,600,000 on the mainland, although these estimates are not to be depended upon.

The retreat strategy was necessary because of their weak extended position, but it will be a costly business for them. They will lose (abandon is a more precise word for it) the railroad from Hankow down to Hongkong, and therefore all land connection with their 200,000 troops now remaining in Malaya (overestimated generally in public comments to be 345,000).

They cannot very well supply these by sea under our air and submarine blockade. Hence, the strategy puts their whole South Asia force in a position for suicide, of an aggressive or voluntary nature.

But if you have been looking at their narrow escape corridors in China, and suspecting the Chinese could cut off large bodies of their troops by driving wedges across the Hongkong-Hankow railroad, you must abandon any such hope.

True enough the Chinese are attacking in some spots, but even in those spots the Japs are managing to keep control of the situation by counter-attacks, and in general the Chinese are not strong enough to do anything important.

All the Japs would have to do to stop any Chinese ambitions is to move troops down the railroads from Hankow, where they have plenty of unused reserve power. They can control any area they really want. Chinese aggressiveness, therefore, must be cautiously limited.

Attention On Malaya

THE Australian move into Borneo has centered attention on Malaya, and caused many to suggest we may hop in there next. This common interpretation represents too-easy anticipation.

We went into Borneo for oil and bases—only those two things. The wells are in bad condition, but can be repaired in time to be of great benefit to us in the final drives of the Pacific war. The air fields in Borneo give us good bombing range radius over everything in the far southwest Pacific from the Celebes through Java and Sumatra to Malaya.

The Japs have not been able to get any appreciable quantities of oil out of Borneo since we went into the Philippines, as we control the sea lanes from there to China and Japan. The loss will therefore not be important to them, but the gain will be helpful to our plans.

With this move we have established a fighting front 1500 miles long from Brunei to Okinawa, facing Asia. In general the continent is only 400 to 600 miles away.

to fight the Russians. The document is said to have asserted that Germany and Poland should be in the bloc.

It is indicated that the red army prosecutor will ask the death penalty in at least some cases.

NIMITZ BACKS TACTICS USED ON OKINAWA

GUAM, June 18—Subsequent events proved the wisdom of tactical decisions made on Okinawa, Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz said yesterday and added that a criticism leveled by Newspaper Columnist David Lawrence was "out of place and ill-advised."

"Some justice to a group of fine soldiers" made it necessary that Lawrence's June 4 column be answered, the Pacific fleet commander told a press conference in an unprecedented statement.

"Lawrence's column showed that he had been badly misinformed," Nimitz said, and had been given "information by someone with an axe to grind." The remarks give the impression, he declared, that the writer has been "made use of for purposes which are not in the best interests of the United States."

(In Washington, Lawrence replied that Nimitz himself was "misinformed about what I wrote." The column, he said, was based on a dispatch from Okinawa by Correspondent Homer Bigart of the New York Herald Tribune who expressed the opinion a landing should have been made by marines behind the Japanese lines).

Lt. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner Jr., tenth army commander, made all tactical decisions on the island "but they had my concurrence," Nimitz declared. "New landings," he said, "would have had to be made over very greatly unsatisfactory beaches against an alerted enemy defense. They would have created heavy casualties and would have created unacceptable supply problems. The tactics decided upon now have proved successful... with losses to ourselves which, although serious, are relatively small. "Suffice it to say now that army and marine commanders on Okinawa and those who covered and supported them have done their duties well and skillfully. They have performed services of great value under the most difficult conditions. They deserve the gratitude of their country."

(The New York Herald Tribune writer Bigart had messaged that Lawrence had quoted him "in seeking to condemn Okinawa as a fiasco." "This correspondent," he added, "still believes that a landing on the south coast of Okinawa would have been better employment of the marines. But to call the campaign a fiasco is absurd").

THEORY

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—I think when the people of Klamath county, in fact the people of our whole good old U. S. A. finally wake up, we're going to find out that these said balloons that are supposed to be sent from Japan over here, are really coming from the Jap camps in our own country. I may be wrong—time will tell. Anyway, it is something for us to concentrate on in the meantime.

REARGUMENT OF LUMBER CASE SET

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—The supreme court today (AP) set reargument of a case involving alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust act through a union-wage and fix prices of products.

The court heard argument on this for the first time several months ago. The reargument term beginning next October. The union members and employers involved are engaged in the lumber and millwork industry in the San Francisco bay area.

The justice department said the employers granted union wage demands in exchange for a union agreement to prevent sale and shipment into the area of lumber products made under wage and working conditions below those in the agreement.

Italy has an area about the same as that of New Mexico.
