Today's Roundup

PROGRESS is being made in the direction of a survey of the land and water resources of the Klamath basin, looking toward its full development as was envisioned in the Klamath brief at the recent water diversion hearing.

EPLEY

The acting regional director for the reclamation service reported this week that the bureau plans a survey of possible channel development in Langell valley and Poe valley, as well as enlargement of the Lost river diversion channel.

His statement was in response to the chamber of commerce and county court request for a comprehensive survey by the bureau.

This is obviously a first step, and it may bring about improvements that can be made without great cost and will be generally beneficial.

Prevention of flood-water spillage into Lost river, by enlargement of the diversion channel, may reduce the flooded area on Tulelake, adding that much additional land to the permanently cultivated areas of the Klamath basin.

This, of course, is only part of the investigatory job to be done. Official estimates indicate that under proper development, Klamath basin irrigable acreage may be more than doubled, and some indicate it can be virtually trebled.

Dreaming Of Mt. Shasta THE Oregonian tells of a returned war veteran who cried when he saw the first fir tree after his return to this country.

A friend of ours, who is not given to sentimentality, was telling us how he felt about seeing Mt. Shasta, which is plainly visible from his home in Klamath Falls.

"It was an old friend," he said. "To tell you the truth, I dreamed about that mountain when I was over there. I can sit here by the hour and watch it."

This is a great country in which we live. The men who have been gone from it will make that clear to us when they return.

News Behind the News

WASHINGTON, June 22 — The national party leaders cross their hearts and say, honest, they had nothing to do with the New York mayoralty choices.

Gov. Tom Dewey claims he did not select Judge Jonah Goldstein as the republican candidate, but heartily approves. Democratic National Chairman Hannegan disavows any involvement in the logical, expected selection of District Attorney William O'Dwyer—but not so loudly.

I am inclined to accept both renunciations of responsibility, because no orderly leadership the rest of Oregon that we intend to laud our own linen regardless of where the chips may fall. It will indicate that we stand for principles—that we recognize the true values which are American. It will indicate that Klamath is becoming a little more interested in being a "home town"—and a little less interested in being known as a "money town."

In short, this case is one of our growing pains which heralds approaching majority.

This case will be quite interesting before it is over. We'll have trial balloons, smoke screens, street gossip and "dope" right out of the feed box—but the most interesting thing of all to watch will be public reaction. At a time when we're fighting a global war against the forces of evil and oppression—will we take the time and interest to protect our very goal right here at home? Frankly, I wonder.

could possibly have plunged itself and its candidates into the ruction which has become a national political marvel.

It all started when the little flower wilted. Mayor LaGuardia succeeded with years of effort in making everyone in New York angry or disgusted with him, except old Judge Samuel Seabury who wields about one vote. While LaGuardia was formerly known affectionately by the translation of his first name "Florello," he has lately been designated "the Big Hat," which is a translation of his administrative demeanor. Coy to the extreme in the current situation, he has his private eye on running for the senate next year if Mr. Truman will only give Democratic Senator Mead something to get him out of the way.

No one wanted LaGuardia in a free choice but many innocent bystanders who only vote, thought good government in the nation's largest city might be promoted by getting Jim Farley, the Roosevelt political maestro, in ahead of the melee. There was not a chance. Farley has a good job and does not get along with the current tribe in Tammany Hall.

Tops In Complexity THE county chairmen of the republican and democratic parties made the selections for the primary in August (election November 7) and created the mix-up so complex that few New York political authorities I consulted were able to furnish any inside background. Mostly they did not know about it—and did not want to know about it. At the risk of life and limb, however, I was able to piece together this following muck:

The republicans thought they did a slick job. Their leading men, Comptroller McGoldrick and Council President Morris, were talked up ahead of time, and then the choice fell surprisingly to Judge Goldstein, who had never been mentioned, probably because he is a democrat. Immediately Mr. Morris declined to run with him, contending the republican candidate should be a republican.

O'Dwyer, named simultaneously, refused to run with two Bronx boys whom Boss Ed Flynn put on the ticket with him, on the ground they were too rough for polite politics. O'Dwyer finally got straightened out with suitable substitutes after the two resigned, but the republican ticket wound up with only one republican on it.

The republicans privately say Morris lost his head, and McGoldrick does not have a winning personality. The city is "normally democratic," but it has not been normal for years, largely due to the presence and surpassing energy of 350,000 communist votes.

O'Dwyer Once Beaten O'DWYER was beaten by LaGuardia last time (1941) by only 132,000 votes, so you can see what havoc 350,000, with even more vote-getting energy than Tammany Hall, may set loose, especially as they control the American labor party, which in 1941 cast 435,000 votes for LaGuardia.

Goldstein's first act was to shove the communists and the labor party off upon O'Dwyer. Men on the republican ticket, democrats though they be, were pledged not to accept ALP support.

So now you see the supposedly reactionary Tammany Hall and the revolutionary communists, plus CIO (and Hillman), combining congenially behind O'Dwyer, whom ALP and the communists defeated in 1941. Make sense? Goldstein is getting ready to conduct a loud campaign against the bosses linking those of Tammany with the Hillman.

The O'Dwyer people claim all this makes their man a 3 to 1 favorite.

A republican with an objective slant would say the odds should be nearer 8 to 5, unless the outs (Morris, Flynn, LaGuardia and the republicans) do something which is supposed to be imminent and sensational, perhaps before this gets into print. And, only 5000 names are required on a petition to get a ticket into the field.
