Republican Meet

"When we open the door into the future, we will enter a different world" said Frank Jenkins, editor and publisher of The Herald and News, in his talk entitled "The Republicanism of Tomorrow" at the Monday meeting of the Council of Oregon Republican Women Incorporated at the club room of the city library.

He pointed out the part that inherited belief, debt and the machine age would play in the new world. Mr. Jenkins led his interested listeners through to his conclusion that a two-party system was necessary in this democracy and that "the republican party should be kept clear, sharp and definite in its name, ideals and cohesiveness."

The next meeting of the council will be held in September when a luncheon meeting will open the fall program. In the meantime, all republican women are invited to join the organization, and may call Mrs. Walter Brown, president, or Mrs. Robert Wattenburg, secretary.
