Separate Medal For Alaskan Service Asked

A distinct "Alaska Service Medal" for the men of the armed forces who have served in the Aleutians or elsewhere in Alaska, west of Sitka, is advocated by Captain Miller Freeman, USNR (Ret.), Seattle publisher, in the current July issue of the journal "Pacific Motor Boat."

Freeman states "There will be boys by the thousands coming back after one to three years in the Aleutians with no special ribbon to indicate faithful performance of a task which they did not choose. True, they are entitled to wear the Pacific-Asiatic ribbon, but with nothing to distinguish the area of service from the distant Central and South Pacific regions."

ENGINEER'S NEPHEW SURVIVES SINKING

Jerry Daman, locomotive engineer for the Weyerhaeuser Timber company at Camp 4, has received word that his nephew, Lt. (jg) Charles Trezona, survived the sinking of an American landing craft by Japanese suicide boats in the Philippines.

Lt. Trezona is a resident of Ely, Minn., and was executive officer of the large landing craft. His mother visited recently with the Daman family at Camp 4.

The Associated Press reported that Lt. Trezona's ship went down after it was hit twice in a minute and a half by Japanese who drove their boats into it. The story was related to the AP by Lt. Trezona, who was thrown into the water by the explosions. He related many incidents of heroism in the confusion that followed the blasts.

Twenty-four of the ship's complement of 63 were reported missing and presumed dead.

Lt. Trezona had several teeth knocked out. He was able, however, to summon enough air to blow up the life belt of a wounded man floating in the water.

Ed Says: . . .

What is Rock Wool? It is a soft, fluffy, fibrous material which looks, as the name implies, like wool. Made by blowing jets of live steam into molten rock . . . the result is a "fluffy" material containing millions of tiny dead air cells that prevent the passage of heat and deaden sound. Fireproof, may be laid around wiring. Light, clean and odorless. Vermin cannot live in it. Rock wool has a thermal conductivity rating of 0.27B.T.U.'s per square inch of thickness. The American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers is the authority for the fact that a 1—one inch thickness of Rock Wool has an insulating efficiency equal to that of 57.3 inches of concrete.
