WHEAT

CHICAGO, July 2 (AP)—Short covering largely by local traders brought a sudden climb in rye futures prices today and gains in the July delivery reached more than 2 cents a bushel at times.

Traders noted that although the total domestic visible supply of rye increased 92,000 bushels last week, Chicago supplies were down 314,000 bushels. This indicated rye was moving out for export, traders said, and brought local short covering. Since trade had been dull, prices responded rapidly.

Most wheat contracts lost ground under hedge selling and little mill buying to counteract it. Losses reached about a cent at times in the deferred deliveries.

Wheat closed ⅛c lower to ¼c higher than Saturday's finish, with only July showing a gain at $1.68⅛. Corn was unchanged, July $1.18⅛; oats were ¼c off to ⅛c up, with July the only gainer at 68¼c. Rye was ⅛ to 1¼c higher, July $1.33⅝-½, and barley was unchanged to 1¼c up, July $1.15¼.
