SOLICITORS DENIED REQUEST BY COUNCIL

An application for permission to solicit from housewives was denied by the city council last night after finding that a city ordinance prohibited entering upon private property to solicit. The solicitors wanted to give a cookbook to housewives in exchange for their name and address so that issues of a magazine could be sent to them. Provided housewives pay the two-cent postage on each issue. The council decided to uphold the ordinance but recommended the matter to the retail trade committee of the chamber of commerce for consideration, and if their report is favorable there may be some way of amending the ordinance in this particular case.

Judge Harold Franey also advised that housewives annoyed with peddlers should notify the city police as there is a definite ordinance prohibiting peddling in residential sections.

"Europe will always be grateful," he asserted, "for the assistance America has given and wishes to give."

CAMPFIRE PERMITS NEEDED IN FOREST

Fourth of July campers will be interested in the announcement of fire prevention restrictions for national forests of Oregon and Washington, effective July 1, and just announced by H. J. Andrews, regional forester.

Campfire permits are required except in developed and fire proofed forest camps. Permit exempt camps are designated by posters. If campers travel by car or with horses, they should take an axe, shovel, and water bucket. Smokers are asked to stop in a safe place to smoke. Experience has proved that it is not safe to smoke while traveling on a forest road or trail, or while walking through the woods, says the forester.

"Careless smokers start over a third of all man caused forest fires," said Andrews. "These fires can be prevented if smokers will use their ash tray, crush burning material in clean damp earth or on a rock, break their match in two, and stop to smoke in a safe place. Careless habits develop during the winter, and carry over into the dry summer. Lighted cigarettes are thrown from car windows and start fires. If such habits could be cured, many a roadside fire would be prevented."

The youngsters admitted the thefts upon questioning by juvenile authorities and said that they would get a job mowing lawns and then case the various homes entered. They would be away and choose their time accordingly to enter the houses, the boys told juvenile officers. The boys were turned over to their parents after interrogation. Most of the loot was recovered, the juvenile office said today.
