Today's Roundup

At 5 o'clock last night in state bond headquarters, a check-up showed that Klamath county was $151,533 short of its E bond quota in the Seventh War Loan.

But the point is that Klamath is now within close striking distance of its bond quota. It can be made. The actual official deadline for local purchases for the Seventh War Loan is Saturday noon.

If all who have the money to invest will do it by the close of bank business Saturday, Klamath will have made its quota in the biggest and toughest of all war loan efforts.

Klamath's bond record is a good one. The Seventh War Loan, if we pass our E bond quota, will make it even better. Tonight and tomorrow morning offer a last chance to get in on the finish of this difficult but prospectively successful campaign.

For A Cleaner City

Being sanitary inspector of Klamath Falls and taking his job seriously, A. W. Downs recently made a tour of a number of other cities to investigate sanitary conditions and regulations.

He came back with the unpleasant news that Klamath Falls is the dirtiest town he saw in an inspection of a number of cities of comparable size. Klamath has a lot of things to recommend it and to be proud of, but cleanliness in the streets, alleys and vacant lots is not one of them, the sanitation chief said.

There may be a question in some minds as to whether Mr. Downs ought to be quoted thusly in our paper. Well, if anything is going to be done about the dirt, it is necessary that we look at the situation squarely and realistically. We can all share the blame, and we can do better.

Mr. Downs says he lays the condition on three things: 1. A lack of public interest in making the city cleaner. 2. Dirt streets within the city from which dirt and mud are carried on to paved streets. 3. An under-manned street department.

He has named these factors in the order of their importance. If we develop civic interest and pride, we will have gone a long way toward a cleaner Klamath. The action that will make it a cleaner Klamath will naturally follow.

Plenty of Water

One thing the June rains did for us was to build up water storage in the main reservoirs of the Klamath country that brightens the moisture supply picture well beyond the present season.

We are quoting some official figures today to clear the confusion that may have resulted from some previously published figures which made erroneous comparisons. Storage in Upper Klamath lake on July 1,

OREGON FARMERS HEAD ELECTED

SALEM, July 6 (AP)—Ronald E. Jones, president of the Oregon State Farmers Union, returned today from Denver, Colo., where the national officers of the organization elected him to the board of directors of the National Automobile Casualty company, now being organized by the National Farmers Union.

Jones said the Farmers Union officers are "well satisfied" with the new secretary of agriculture, Clinton Anderson, asserting "he has been in general sympathetic with our program and objectives. He is not tied up with any particular farm organization so is able to look at the picture as a whole."

Jones added that the farm leaders are satisfied with the Truman administration, although there was some criticism that too many legislators are being given executive posts, which might develop a tendency to solve administrative problems by political compromises instead of by sound executive principles.

NEW BANK PLANNED

PORTLAND, July 6 (AP)—The First National bank today announced plans to construct a new bank building in Oregon City next year.

1945, was 405,420 acre feet. This is an increase of 36,320 acre feet over the storage on the same date of 1944. Gerber dam reservoir now holds the highest volume of water in its history—73,080 acre feet. On July 1, 1944, the total was 46,890 acre feet. Clear lake dam, the Klamath country's other main reservoir, also is well ahead of last year. The total on July 1, 1945, was 292,430 acre feet, as compared with 277,480 acre feet on the same day in 1944. That's a big drink for Klamath basin crops.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKENZIE AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

RUSSIA'S request for participation with Britain, France and America in the proposed conference regarding Tangier's international status is one of the important (and highly significant) developments of the day. In thus reaching the length of the Mediterranean to its western gateway, Moscow has staked its claim of influence right in the heart of preserves long dominated by Britain, France, Spain and Italy. The United States was invited to take part in the parley and accepted, but Russia wasn't included. The immediate reaction to the Soviet move was a statement by a spokesman of the French foreign ministry that the conference had been indefinitely postponed pending action in Moscow's request.

Chronic Boil

TANGIER is a chronic boil on one of the world's tender spots. It's the southern gate-post of the Strait of Gibraltar, which obviously places it among the globe's most highly strategic positions. This "neutral" zone occupies about 225 square miles on the northwestern bulge of Africa. Only 14 miles across (within easy cannon range) is the coast of Spain. Twenty-nine miles northeast is John Bull's rock of Gibraltar.

Because of its dominating position, this zone was detached from Morocco in 1906 and placed under international guardianship. There were subsequent agreements and actual control came to rest with Spain, Italy, France and Britain. Moscow bases its present claim on the fact that Russia was one of the participants in the original treaty although later she dropped it. Tangier—in theory chastely neutral but very often mixed up in intrigue and power-politics—naturally zoomed into vast prominence when the war began. He who could control this spot on the Strait of Gibraltar would indeed be in a powerful position. One of those who didn't overlook this was Spain's Generalissimo Franco.

Came the fateful month of June, 1940, when France was tottering and Britain was fighting with back to wall—and at this critical juncture Franco was moved to occupy Tangier "to guarantee its neutrality." This was a unilateral action—not interfered with by Italy and Germany. A bit later the generalissimo was further moved to incorporate Tangier in Spanish Morocco, and there was nobody to stop him.

Franco Takes Over

INTERNATIONAL law was displaced by Spanish law. Franco fortified the port of Tangier, despite allied protests. Throughout the rest of the war there were charges by the allies that axis ships were being serviced at Tangier, that axis submarines were operating out of there and that German and Italian agents swarmed the zone like ants.

That brings us up to the present proposal that Tangier be returned to the status of a neutral international zone. Presumably because of Franco's unilateral action in 1940, Spain wasn't consulted when France and Britain took the matter up recently, although there have been reports that Madrid would be brought into the picture later.

Russia's desire to participate may be disconcerting to the western European powers, but it can hardly be surprising. She is pressing Turkey for new arrangements which would give the Soviet free access to the Mediterranean through the Dardanelles. The Muscovites certainly intend to operate in that strategic sea, and so it isn't strange to find them interested in its western outlet.

HOPKINS NAMED TO INDUSTRIAL POST

NEW YORK, July 6 (AP)—Harry L. Hopkins, for 12 years a key government figure and presidential adviser, today stepped into a new diplomatic role—as impartial chairman of the New York women's coat-and-suit industry.

His appointment to the post was announced by David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers industry, who said Hopkins would assume his new duties after a few weeks' rest. As impartial chairman, Hopkins will preside over labor-management contracts, arbitrate disputes, settle industrial problems and generally promote harmony in the gigantic $500,000,000-a-year industry.

Hopkins, a close personal friend of the late President Roosevelt, resigned his $15,000-a-year advisers' post to President Truman last Tuesday on grounds of ill health. Union officials reported his new salary would be "in the neighborhood" of $25,000 annually.

BODY DISCOVERED

WALLA WALLA, July 6 (AP)—The body of Joe McCoy, Hermiston, Ore., was found yesterday near White Salmon, hundreds of miles from a swimming hole on the Snake river where the youth was swimming with friends recently, Sheriff Archie Shick said.

AUTO MAKERS WANT TO KEEP COSTS SECRET

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—Auto industry tradition which keeps each manufacturer's cost figures his own top secret is posing a first class headache for OPA in fixing new passenger car price ceilings. The problem, it was learned today, is this: The industry, perhaps the most highly competitive in American business, is holding out against any round-robin conference where cost information would be openly discussed to determine how much of an industry-wide price increase over 1942 levels should be allowed.

That's the most closely guarded information in the industry, and no manufacturer is willing to share his with a competitor, an industry spokesman said. This is the case even though the production wheels are turning again and at least one company (Ford) already is rolling a few cars off its assembly lines. Opposed to a general conference, some companies have met informally with OPA to present a case for separate sessions. Some have presented cost figures but have asked the agency that they be held in confidence. They are willing that OPA analyze the collective data of the manufacturing costs, but they don't want it pooled for a competitor to see.

Thus far OPA has refused to comment on ceiling negotiations beyond saying that it plans a formal meeting soon with the auto makers. Officials of the agency would not state whether it would be an industry conference to determine a policy or a series of sessions with individual companies. Industry spokesmen said a decision on ceilings will have to be reached soon or cars will be ready for the market before price tags are provided.

While no company has hinted at a price level for new models, the industry is agreed that prices must be higher than those of 1942 to compensate for increased labor and materials costs.

TULELAKE PROJECT SEEN BY OFFICIALS

Initiation of proposed studies in connection with extending developments of the Tulelake area were underway when U. S. Bureau of reclamation officials from California visited the project this week to observe physical conditions.

S. A. Kerr of Sacramento, acting regional planning engineer for region 2, and C. W. Birmingham of Redding, bureau engineer, were in Klamath July 3 and 4 in this connection.

B. E. Hayden, former superintendent of the bureau of reclamation has been retained as consulting economist. He will meet Goodrich W. Lineweaver, director of operations and maintenance, and W. W. Water Main Break Floods Portland Area

PORTLAND, Ore., July 6 (AP) A 24-inch water main burst in downtown Portland today, flooding eight square blocks and marooning thousands of workers en route to their jobs. The break cut off the water supply of the business district and most residences on the west side. Damage to basements and semi-submerged automobiles was expected to run into thousands of dollars.

Pressure of the stream sent sections of pavement hurtling into the air ahead of a keyser of water. "It looked as if the whole street were blowing up," said an office worker, as he waded down the sidewalk toward his job.

52 THOUSAND WORKERS IDLE OVER NATION

By The Associated Press The world's second largest steel mill was shut down today by a strike, but in Akron, O. tires began rolling off production lines in five navy-seized rubber plants.

The first of 16,700 CIO United Rubber Workers reported for duty this morning at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company plants which had been strikebound for 20 days. 52,250 Idle

Over the national labor disputes idled a total of 52,250 persons.

The South Chicago plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, a company spokesman said, was forced to shut down today, idling 13,000 employees following a work stoppage by 50 plant CIO railroad operators.

The plant's normal production of steel for the war effort is 10,500 tons every 24 hours, and it ranks second to the company's huge Gary (Ind.) plant in size. In Cleveland, Republic Steel corporation's huge continuous strip mill was closed by an authorized stoppage by 100 CIO United Steelworkers and labor disputes kept idle 4100 coal miners in eastern Pennsylvania cutting anthracite production 12,500 tons daily.

A company spokesman at the Carnegie-Illinois company said the stoppage by the railroad operators stemmed from a strike last week by 30 maintenance men which resulted in the laying off of railroad workers. They charged that seniority rights had been ignored in the lay-off.

Republic Steel officials said the stoppage at the strip mill which started Monday, may cause company finishing units to shut down for lack of materials. CIO officials said they would urge the steelworkers to return to their posts.

In Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Ower Williams, regional director of the solid fuels administration, said the work stoppage by 4100 miners at the Prospect and Henry workings, Hazleton shaft of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, and the Huber mine of the Glen Alden Coal company is cutting anthracite production 12,500 tons daily.

While the navy operated the Goodyear plants, 16,500 employees of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company in Akron remained on strike for the sixth day. In Toledo, there was no immediate indication of settlement of the stoppage by 6000 employees of the Spicer Manufacturing company, producer of jeep parts.
