WAR PROPERTY SURPLUS SAID NOT HARMFUL

SEATTLE, July 13 (AP)—Surplus property in the government's hands at the war's end will not be in sufficient quantity to disturb the economic stability of the nation, Robert W. Hurley, former Connecticut governor and member of the federal surplus property board, believes.

The amount which will be marketable is greatly overrated, he told a meeting of 200 Pacific northwest business men last night Much will be tanks, airplanes, warships, artillery and munitions, which will not compete with normal manufacturing in peacetime.

Hurley was one of several ranking officers of the army, navy and federal office of surplus property and contract settlement who told of plans for "fast, fair and final" termination of war contracts when Japan is defeated.

The west coast, he said, will have "very difficult" problems because of the rise of "big business" in the area. Of Washington state's 327 million dollars worth of added plant facilities, only about 12 million will be readily adaptable to postwar manufacturing, he estimated.

"The great bulk of your new plant is in aluminum which, with other nonferrous metals production, takes up 143 million dollars of the whole," he said, "We may be sure unless we bring about the postwar use of the sheet and plate aluminum from the Spokane mill, that plant cannot operate. And if it shuts down and stays shut down, the opportunities for establishing small plants to use its production will be considerably curtailed."

Slayer Of Teacher Faces Firing Squad

SALT LAKE CITY, July 13 (AP)—A few minutes after calmly serving cherry pie to reporters, James Joseph Doedl, sharp-faced, partly-bald young murderer of a woman school teacher, died before a firing squad in the Utah prison yard at daybreak today.

He drank coffee and smoked a cigar, then calmly said "So long" before the black hood was slipped over his head.

The .30-30 caliber bullets from the five-man firing squad thudded into the thin chest of the 27-year-old Oklahoma City man at 5:57 a. m., mountain war time.

It was 33 months and one day after he and a fellow hitch-hiker beat to death with a hammer middle-aged Abigail Agnes Williams of San Leandro, Calif.

Body of Fisherman Believed Found

VICTORIA, B. C., July 13 (CP) Provincial police said today a badly decomposed body believed to be that of John W. Hale, Yakima, Wash., has been found about seven miles from the scene of the wreck of the Seattle fishing boat Summitt, which exploded and sank off the west coast of Vancouver island May 23.

Hale was one of four crew members lost in the Summitt sinking. The bodies of Louis A. Larsen, owner and captain of the Summitt, John Sigurdson, and Lanson Moyer, all of Seattle, have been recovered.

The fourth body is at Tofino lifeboat station on the west coast, awaiting positive identification by relatives.

"Plan Your '46 Vacation Now," Say "No" Boys

LOS ANGELES, July 13 (AP) How would you like to spend your vacation in a beautiful mountain resort, complete with private bath and maid service?

If you would, and live anywhere along the Pacific coast between Canada and Mexico, you'd better start making your reservations now—for the summer of 1946.

Take it from travel agency men, who have begun calling themselves the "no" boys, you couldn't fight your way into any big resort in the far west this season with a Thompson submachine gun.

An Associated Press survey of travel agencies, resorts and national parks in California, Oregon and Washington disclosed that only a few of the smaller inns and taverns in isolated regions will accept reservations. Many vacation spots were sold out for this season as early as last January, and every resort of any size is booked solidly through Labor Day.

Stanley Eisman, vice president in charge of the Pacific coast division of a national travel service (ask-Mr.-Foster) said this is probably the biggest year resorts on the west coast ever have experienced.

Washington state agencies reported the reopening of a few resorts in Rainier and Olympic parks, but these additional accommodations mean little in the face of the unprecedented demand. Mrs. Luvera Snow, Seattle agent of a Pacific northwest travel agency, said "We're just frantic."

In Oregon affairs have reached such a state that weekenders of the hardier variety, undaunted by the lack of hotel and cottage space, are going to the beaches anyway and sleeping in their cars.

COMMISSIONER TO STUDY LAW CODES

SALEM, July 13 (AP) — The legislative interim committee to study revision of Oregon laws announced today it will send Bryan Goodenough, state code commissioner, to Kentucky and Wisconsin to study the code system of those states.

Oregon's code has not been revised since it was compiled in 1862. The interim committee will report to the 1947 legislature, and will recommend elimination of many laws and a new compilation of others.

Members of the committee are Sen. Irving Rand, Portland, chairman; Sen. Paul Patterson, Hillsboro; and Reps. Carl Francis, Dayton; Robert H. Bennett, Portland, and W. W. Balderree, Grants Pass.

Lions Eat Cougar At Weekly Meeting

COOS BAY, July 13 (AP)—The Lions club was amazed to find real chops on their usually meatless plates at the weekly luncheon meeting.

But when, at the close, it was announced the meat came with the compliments of Vern Gray, all 40 groaned with equal fervency.

They knew member Gray had just shot a record-size cougar.
