U. S. Superforts Solve Jap Homeland Problems

By The Associated Press
It's the queerest thing, the way these Superforts are giving a boost to the Japanese war effort.

The last anyone heard, the Japanese needed more room in their more commodious cities, and the Superforts provided some.

Now, by current Japanese accounts recorded by the federal communications commission, the Hon. enemy was on the verge of running out of scrap iron.

And at this crucial moment, said the Tokyo newspaper Asahi, why a long came the Superforts and did the Japanese the following favor:

"At the beginning of this war, scrap iron was not important, so it was gathered from among the common people.

Medford Housing Picture Brightens

MEDFORD, July 21 (AP)—A housing shortage here, accentuated by the influx of navy officers for the Camp White hospital, will be partially alleviated by the national housing authority, city officials said today.

George Coplan, Seattle, regional NHA director, and James Maxwell of the Portland NHA office met here with the Jackson county housing authority. Coplan said priorities for privately-built houses would favor rental units rather than those for owner-occupancy.

Airmen Back In The Blue Despite Missing Limbs

TAMPA, Fla., July 21 (AP)—The three airmen lay in Walter Reid hospital. Each had lost a leg in action.

General Henry M. Arnold visited the hospital. He asked if there was anything he could do for them.

"Yes, sir," they told the air forces chief in unison, "Let us fly again."

And today, along with another veteran who'd lost an arm, they are flying again at Drew field here.

They are Capt. Kenneth C. Jewell of Cumberland, Md., Lt. Joseph M. Hannon of Boston and Lt. Wm. R. Kraham of Cooperstown, N. Y.

The airman with the missing arm is Lt. Reuben G. Bork of Bowler, Wis.

They are observation instructors at Drew.

It happened this way: Some months after the request, they met the general again at Biltmore AAF hospital near Coral Gables. They talked to him. Gen. Arnold realized they were very much sincere.

He issued an order restoring them to flying status, and they became the first pilots to fly for the AAF after losing limbs.

What Late Issues of Two National Magazines Have To Say About

JIMMIE LUNCEFORD AND HIS ORCHESTRA

AMERICA'S FAMILY MAGAZINE LOOK (Issue of July 10, 1945)

THE WORLD'S FOREMOST AMUSEMENT WEEKLY THE BILLBOARD (Issue of July 7, 1945)

(Booking Agency, Harold Oxley)

Many people think of Jimmie Lunceford as having a band that can only jump. This isn't the case at all. Lunceford's band can turn out a lively and melodic brand of stuff, too. There are a number of smooth tunes in the library that the guys do excellently. Maestro has good arrangements and fine musicians to play them.

Lunceford fronts well. His pleasing personality is for the payees. But to the crew, he's a leader who holds his music tight and gets the most out of the arrangements. When he settles down to do one of his numbers, the patron may either dance or listen. The music is designed for both.

A new addition to the outfit is Nick Brooks, vocalist. While Brooks isn't in the groove far enough for the band to follow on some of the arrangements, the music boys take it slowly, giving him every break. He baries in an okay fashion, and after a few more weeks with the outfit should be knocking it off in even a better fashion. Brooks' handling of "I Should Care," with Russell Green on trumpet, and a jump tune, with Joe Thomas on tenor, come in for plenty hand. Another sax man of whom Lunceford can be justly proud is Kurt Bradford, alto.

Joe Marshall, on drums, is an asset. He works hard and gives out with a good beat. Earl Hardy, on tram, is called on for spotlighted parts.

Lunceford can satisfy dancers—and does. Sam Abbott.
