

4-H GIRLS TO SWIM, BOAT AT LAKE O' WOODS

Bedrolls, lunches and eager 4-H girls arrived at the health center Sunday morning at 10:30, ready to leave for cool, inviting Lake O' Woods.

An hour later two school buses piled high with luggage, and noisy with gay shouts and songs of children, were rolling leeward with no stop-overs planned en route.

Before leaving, the girls, ranging in age from 10 to 16 years, were examined by Dr. Peter Rozendal, Klamath county public health officer. Weights were checked and heights measured by Lt. Marilyn Bryan, assisted by Mrs. Lydia Howard.

A wild, gay scramble to choose bunks followed the arrival of the buses, with first choices juggling several times until close friends were above, below or next to each other, in the two-deck dormitory beds.

After sleeping arrangements had been settled, those who had not eaten their lunches on the way found shady spots to picnic.

No program was planned for Sunday, the time being devoted to getting settled and becoming acquainted with the surroundings, but vesper services were held about the campfire in the evening.

The camp buildings, used by various organizations for summer camps, will be occupied by 4-H club members from Klamath county for the next two weeks. They are located about 50 yards from the lake shore, where a fine shallow beach insures safe swimming.

Swimming and boating, under safety supervision by Cpl. Robert Henderson, marine lifeguard, will be high points of the week's program. Lt. Bryan is on duty at all times to take control of any emergency.

Instructive classes in hand-craft, planned entertainment each evening, and plenty of good food and exercise, guarantee a wonderful outing for the children, some of whom earned the vacation through scholarships in 4-H club work.

A new bulletin received from Oregon State college shows a higher percentage of its farm boys and girls are enrolled in 4-H club work than any other state west of New Jersey.

Oregon also led in percentage of club members in ratio to the total number of all rural youth. This includes non-farm boys and girls living in small communities as well as those living on farms.

"If 4-H work is good for those who are members, it must also be good for others," Harry Seymour, state 4-H club leader stated.

FORMER TULELAKE SOLDIER RECOVERS

TULELAKE — PFC Conrad Schultz, USMC machine gunner, formerly of Tulelake, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto A. Schultz, now of Santa Ana, is recovering from critical wounds suffered several months ago while serving on a tank operating on Okinawa. He is a patient at Oak Knoll naval hospital, near Oakland.

PFC Schultz, well known in musical circles here, suffered deep lacerations of his upper right arm, destroying the nerve. Severe burns on hands and face and lacerations on his legs and feet were also sustained. He and one other member of the tank crew of five escaped when the vehicle received a direct hit.

He was visited last week by Conrad and Byron Johnson, Malin, who brought back word of his condition, refuting reports here that Schultz had lost both arms as a result of the injury. While he has no control over his right arm, it is expected that his condition will improve. He asked that friends here be advised of his improvement.

SCHROEDER ATTENDS EMPLOYMENT MEET

In an effort to meet post-war employment problems which will rise with the war's end, a post-war planning conference of the United States employment service was held in Portland July 26 and 27. Attending from Klamath Falls was John G. Schroeder, senior employment officer with the USES.

As an outcome of this meeting Schroeder is planning to make a survey of conditions in local industries to determine the number of employees needed in peace-time production. This local picture will include prospective work of the city and county.

Besides the readjustment of local industries, there will be a readjustment of soldiers to civilian life and the replacement of civilians who have been on war jobs.

According to Schroeder, approximately 11 per cent of the population is in the armed forces. As these men will replace many civilians now working in industries, the unemployment service expects to have as many people unemployed at the end of the war as there were in 1933.

There will be another post-war planning conference September 21 and 22. This will be held in Klamath Falls.

KLAMATH PUD PLANS MEETING AUGUST 3

The sponsors committee of the Klamath public utility district will hold a meeting at the Willard hotel at eight o'clock in the evening, Friday, August 3.

Anyone interested in preparing the way for beginning construction of the 230,000 K. W. transmission line from Goldendale, Wash., to Klamath Falls as soon as materials and manpower are available is invited to attend this meeting, committee-men said.

The committee desires to add to its membership as many substantial citizens and business men of the town and county as are interested in quick and permanent post-war development so that this section may be ready here as soon as the $160,000,000 development program of the Bonneville Power Administration gets under way, the announcement added.

All persons having petitions out are urged to have them filled, acknowledged by a notary public and presented at this meeting. The state hydroelectric commission is handicapped by a shortage of man-power and early filing of petitions will aid it in making an early report in this area, it was stated.

The 14 cotton-growing states have 737 cotton-spinning mills.

Battle-Scarred GI Admits He'll Be 15 In September

TAUNTON, Mass., July 31 (AP)—A battle-scarred Texas GI, one of 1963 overseas veterans aboard the SS Claymount Victory which docked at Boston yesterday, was en route today while army authorities rechecked his statement that he was only 14 years old.

Pvt. Robert Kelso of Houston, who wears the Purple Heart and two battle stars earned during his six months of fighting in France and Germany, told newsmen that he would be 15 September 20 and that he entered the army after going to a Houston draft board July 28, 1944, and declaring himself 18 that day.

After his induction at Fort Sill, Okla., the freckled-faced youth, who said he left high school in his first year, telephoned his mother.

"Mom was going to report me to army authorities, but dad fixed everything," he said with a grin.

"It's his life, let him live it," Kelso quoted his father as saying.

Nicknamed "Junior" by his 342nd armored field artillery buddies, some of whom he said knew his age, Kelso was hospitalized for six weeks after being bayoneted during "mopping-up" operations at Oppenheim, Germany.

POST-WAR BOOST FOR PACIFIC TOLD

SEATTLE, July 31 (AP)—Thousands of jobs will be provided in the Pacific Northwest with development of rivers and harbors in the postwar period, Rep. Henry D. Larcade Jr., of Louisiana, acting chairman of a rivers and harbors subcommittee, said at a press conference yesterday.

The committee is conducting an investigation of projects under consideration for the Pacific and gulf coasts.

"Beach erosion control has been at a standstill since the war," the congressman said, "and it is obvious that the government will have to embark on this program on a big scale as soon as peace comes."

"The project itself is important
