Editor's Plan Would Give Parity Prices To Farmers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP)—W. R. Ronald, editor of the Mitchell (S. D.) Daily Republic, proposed today what he termed a "self-financing peacetime farm program" designed to bring at least parity prices to farmers.

Ronald submitted his plan to the agriculture department reorganization committee headed by Milton Eisenhower, president of Kansas State college. Invited by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson to confer with the committee, Ronald said his plan should add "from 15 to 25 billion dollars to the national income."

Main features include:
 1. Change the name of the agricultural adjustment agency (AAA) to the National Conservation association (NCA).
 2. Farmers to provide a conservation fund themselves by means of an excise tax of possibly 25 per cent of the price of the first sale of their products.
 3. The tax would be paid back to the farmers, according to the degree of their adherence to conservation practices. Those rating 100 per cent on conservation would receive all their tax back, with premiums these to be paid by the government paid to those with higher ratings.
 4. Loans on any crops would be available at full parity prices. These would be handled through banks with the government guaranteeing them.
 5. Maximum acreages for each crop would be announced yearly by the secretary of agriculture "to provide an abundance of foodstuffs of all kinds." This acreage would be allocated by the farmers themselves through the NCA.

Ronald said operation of the plan would reduce drastically the size of the agriculture department by eliminating various agencies. He added:
 "Give the farmer a fair price and a large part of the department of agriculture could be abolished."

Canning With Less Sugar

Water Pack... Fruits may be canned satisfactorily without sugar by boiling water or fruit juice in place of sugar syrup. Absence of sugar may cause some loss of color and flavor in the fruit.

Corn Syrup & Honey... Corn syrup or honey may be used to replace up to one-half of sugar specified in canning syrups. Corn syrup has one-half the sweetening power of sugar.

To Make Syrup, Using Corn Syrup... Combine sugar, syrup and water, then bring to boil.

To Make Syrup, Using Honey... Combine sugar and water, bring to boil. Add honey, stir and bring to rolling boil. Skim. Honey imparts its characteristic flavor to fruits. The use of a mild-flavored honey is recommended.

It is best not to use brown sugar or molasses in canning.
