Today's Roundup

AS these words are written Friday night, the Japanese are quibbling over the peace and still firing on Americans.

The Japs evidently had other ideas. They have attacked American planes flying over Tokyo on photographic missions.

What About Good Faith? THE Japs are constitutional liars. They are masters of duplicity.

We hope not. We would like to believe in Jap honor. But the record doesn't encourage us. Tolerance, the fundamental American principle in dealing with a beaten adversary, may not work with the Japs.

The War Today

By J. M. ROBERTS JR. Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst

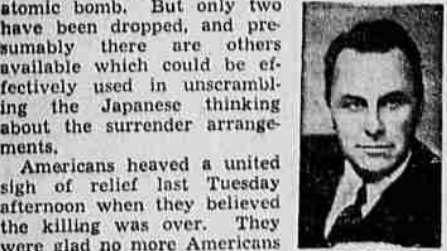

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S remark, that he doesn't expect the Japanese to be able to seek revenge, presumably covers a United States determination to see that they don't—and it already looks like a matter far different from that of Germany.

After World War I the Germans cried that their army had never been beaten, that other factors forced them to break off the war; given a fair chance, their army would have won, and next time it would win. It almost did.

Just before Hirohito broadcast his surrender rescript, Lt. Gen. Reikichi Tada, president of the Japanese board of technology, was on the air saying that "At this time the national feeling is no doubt a desire to rise anew and in the years to come to advance science to the point where some weapon superior to the new type bomb may be devised in revenge."

Nip Quoted IN a recent issue of the "Infantry Journal," a "Major General" Tada was quoted as saying: "The divine mission of Japan puts her above treaty breaking because what would be wrong in the rest of the world is right in Japan. For Japan, any means justifies the end."

Have We Won? I'M wondering whether we've really won the war," said one who has studied the war closely since its very beginning.

Temporary Surrender

IN Japan there is an army estimated at 2,250,000 men which has not been beaten in this war, and already the Japanese are saying that they were forced to surrender by material and scientific power; that it is temporary; that the course for Japan is to bow to present circumstances and build for the future.

Just before Hirohito broadcast his surrender rescript, Lt. Gen. Reikichi Tada, president of the Japanese board of technology, was on the air saying that "At this time the national feeling is no doubt a desire to rise anew and in the years to come to advance science to the point where some weapon superior to the new type bomb may be devised in revenge."
