News Behind The News

FRANK JENKINS Editor
MALCOLM EPLEY Managing Editor
A temporary combination of the Evening Herald and the Klamath News...

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Ho hum. Electricity issues are being pressed bravely to the fore. Current thrill is the staggering challenge of Commerce Secretary Wallace to the nation to provide 60,000,000 jobs...

Today's Roundup

THERE is reason for public gratification that Wednesday morning's picket line incident passed without trouble. The action of the CIO pickets was orderly, in spite of feeling that may naturally be expected under such circumstances...

EPLEY

Readers of this column will recall the hope expressed here, after the picket line incident of one week ago, that there would be constructive results from a conference agreed upon at that time between the AFL and CIO spokesmen...

Unfortunately, that was not done. Since then, there has been no joint meeting with both unions and management represented. Management officials said they were waiting for the prospective conferees to arrange the meeting...

AFL machinists, who agreed at that time to turn back from the picket line in expectation of such a conference, apparently decided to go to work Wednesday when the meeting failed to develop in the course of a week.

We still hope that unionists and management will get together soon in an attempt to reach common ground that will end the work stoppage.

Medford Plug
HERB GREY, the genial advertising manager of the Medford Mail-Tribune who occasionally pinch-hits as an editorial writer...

Now, in neighborly spirit and as a citizen interested in the welfare of the Marine Corps, Mr. Grey has written an editorial expressing the hope that the marine base will be maintained here permanently.

"The word that the Marine Barracks at Klamath Falls will serve as a marine corps separation center for the Pacific Northwest and northern California is pleasing to those who live this side of the Cascades. The excellent facilities of the marine installation in the hills near Klamath Falls should lend themselves admirably to this new activity."

"Capt. Lowell Coggeshall, of the navy, has shown that the altitude and invigorating climate of Klamath county speeds the cure of malaria and filariasis. Here is an ideal reconditioning center for the marines who will have many assignments in distant and tropical lands in years to come."

"We hope that the announcement that the Barracks will be used as a separation center indicates the continued usefulness of this establishment in the future. Klamath Falls has the only marine corps installation in the northwest at this time. We see no reason why it should not become a permanent base—H.G."

When a visitor in our office saw the headline over Mr. Grey's editorial, reading: "Make Marine Base Permanent," he asked us if Medford had a marine base. He expressed some surprise that Mr. Grey was talking about a project helpful to Klamath Falls.

The spirit expressed in the editorial is appreciated here, and it is suggestive of inter-community friendliness in southern Oregon that will be helpful to all of us.

A GEM of THOUGHT
There was an old codger named Fred;
He was 90 years old, 'twas said.
When asked if he did not hate to grow old
He just started to scold.
"Heck, no! If I wasn't growing old I'd be dead."

Free Facts

I THINK I will skip the thrill of paying $2. It is not that I am frightened or afraid to shoot, but a matter of economy. Free, I can get just about the same things, with actual facts and figures from the committee for economic development, Paul Hoffman of Studebaker, president—no royalties. CED made a business survey saying industry will have 53,500,000 jobs this first year, without molestation by Mr. Wallace. (Darn that fly again; he left a speck of blood where I swatted him.) If you count the men still in the armed services, you have your or Mr. Wallace's 60,000,000, beg pardon, I mean 60,000,000 (for a moment I thought I was dealing in the budget which is $66,000,000,000 this year) without anyone getting staggered, or frightened.

If you are not afraid to shoot, I suggest you, Mr. Wallace, CIO et cie shoot at 130,000,000 jobs, which goal should bring $3 a copy. My aim is high. I hereby adopt the 130,000,000 job goal, without charge—but not altogether. I have a new book out myself which sells for $1.50, not on this subject, but on a live one, the juvenile oligarchy and the progressive education trust. It is called "The Ease Era," and while Mr. Wallace will merely stagger you for $2, I will burn you for $1.50. If you do not burn I will refund your money personally, although I may wish to check you for scars. (Think of Wallace getting $1 per copy royalty for all that obsolete data, when I get only 75 cents for the studied collection of my sound viewpoint on the most thunderous question of the hour over a year and a half.)

Colossal Plan

SIMILARLY colossal is the way the Wallace-CIO program is developing in congress—the forthright, daring ventures for the common man, the common unemployed man who presumably will not get one of the 60,000,000 jobs. Proposal No. 1 would give 90 per cent of non-workers only $5 more a week for six more weeks, making $25 for six months in all (think of these amazing new dimensions.) Also what will make you catch your breath, the second stupendous proposal promising every man a job leaning on a rake for the government or warming those nice Constitution avenue chairs in air-cooled comfort, if unable to find the 60,000,000 jobs.

I wish I could afford air cooling; this abnormal September humidity is about to get me; 70 degrees, it is today.

Of course, this breath-taking full employment does not reach so far as Huey Long did in promising to make "every man a king," yet, then again, Huey got $3 a copy for his book.

Colossal is, as colossal does. Hence the jam the sponsors of this legislation got themselves into, had developed equal vastness. It seems the Kilgore bill says $25 a week, but not over two-thirds of a week's pay. Now $25 is two-thirds of $37.50, and a man on that salary, after old-age pensions and withholding tax really retains about $25. So if he is not afraid to shoot his job he can get just about the same pay by not working for six months. Yet this is not the cause of the rumor that someone may shoot the authors of the bill.

Another Error

THERE is another error. Correspondingly stupendous... A large number of states have laws saying that if the federal government gives more, they will automatically give that much less, to maintain their $20 a week maximum. So if the bill passed in the form CIO offered, the unemployed would get no more and the states would just take the federal money and pocket it. Why doesn't someone in CIO think of these things? It generally requires two or three years to change state laws, so what to do? Frankly, I know what I am going to do; namely, get a nickel drink at the drug store right now. I suspect congress may do the same.

Ho hum. Thrill-packed theories ride high these days, for "Americans who are not afraid to shoot" and "are not frightened of setting their aims high." Well, mine are up to 130,000,000 jobs and $30 a week unemployment for those who can't get the 130,000,000 jobs. Hereafter I am not to be left behind. And when I get my new DDT gun I will be these flies and mosquitoes will drop, because I am not afraid to shoot.

The War Today

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

One would search long and hard to find anything good about General Tojo, but we must give him credit for making a valuable contribution to the welfare of mankind when he shot himself yesterday in Tokyo.

Tojo was whelped in militarism. He rose with its strength until he became the mainspring of the mighty war-machine which tried to establish a greater East Asia under the rule of Japan. His was the hand which held the dagger that stabbed Uncle Sam in the back, for the general was premier when the sneak attack was made on Pearl Harbor.

Through the long years succeeding Pearl Harbor the Japanese people came to look upon Tojo as the arch militarist who would lead them to victory and make them overlords of their fellow men. Might was right. Militarism was the pass-word to imperial greatness, and Tojo symbolized militarism.

Now suddenly the public is stunned with the disclosure that its god had feet of clay. Tojo, the chief of all the militarists, shoots himself because he has failed, that is, because militarism has failed. Many Japanese will nod with approval and say that this was the only honorable thing the general could do; this was the only way he could atone for dishonoring his mikado. But whatever construction you put on it, the fact remains that for the people of Japan are for the first time seeing militarism in its true colors.

Aid To Allies
We may expect, I believe, that Tojo's action — and similar events which are emphasizing the evils and futility of militarism — will be of invaluable assistance to the allies in remoulding the character of the Japanese people. For that is our task, and it must be done by enlightenment.

"I cannot see Japan exactly like the United States overnight. The people are not ready, they have been so long under militaristic government. Changes must be gradual or the world will find Japan in a grip as bad as that of the military clique that precipitated the war."

Revealing Bullet
Wherever the truth may lie in this matter, the bullet which Tojo sent through his body will act as a tracer of light to help the people of Japan see the truth about aggression. Democracy may move fast in the mikado's domains, once it gets under full way.

Position Clear
It would be interesting to know all Tojo's thoughts in contemplation of death. If he intended to commit hara-kiri because he had failed in his duty to his emperor, why didn't he do it immediately? My guess is that there might be a bare chance to save his own skin. He didn't want to die for honor or for any other reason. However, he preferred to commit suicide rather than face hanging on an allied gallows, and so we see him shooting himself at the last moment as American soldiers arrive at his home to arrest him. Even in this he may have failed, for latest reports say American medical skill may save him to stand trial as a war criminal.

If you'll hark back to the time of the German collapse, you will note a similar disposition on the part of many of the chief militarists. Franz von Papen, one of the most dangerous men in Europe, Goering and others of the Hitlerian gang, all clung to their wicked lives and tried to create the illusion of innocence before their conquerors.

That's what Tojo did. He played off life clear to the board, and then when he saw he had lost, he shot himself.

Has YOUR Driver's License Expired?
Here's a friendly suggestion, with no strings attached: Take a look at the expiration date on your driver's license. You may learn with surprise that it has already expired. Or that the time for renewal is nearly here. Driving with an expired license is illegal, and may also be embarrassing. And very few people, we have found, remember their license renewal dates.
