BPW Club Observes National Week

By JOY ROLPH

"If you want something done, ask a busy person," as the saying goes, which is no doubt the reason why members of the Business and Professional Women's club—all busy people, holding responsible positions and managing their homes—manage to get so much done when it comes to community service.

Of course, that's one of the main purposes of the Federation of BPW, and those who become members of this large organization, international as well as national in scope, expect to fulfill their obligations to their home towns and cities by extending their services whenever needed or requested. In fact, the BPW club is actually a service organization, with sociability a side issue.

This past week, business women's groups throughout the nation have been observing National Business Women's Week, with special programs on the theme of "Jobs Enough To Go Round," a topic that must be seriously considered now that the postwar years are actually upon us, and not something vague to be talked about for the future.

The Klamath county club opened observance of the national week by attendance at church services on Sunday, October 7, and in the afternoon members and guests attended the annual silver tea when Emma Carter presided as hostess at her attractive new home on South Sixth street.

Each year the money raised by this tea is donated to a specific fund. Twenty-five dollars contributed by those attending Sunday's affair has been turned over to the Community Fund drive as the club's contribution toward the $75,000 to be raised in Klamath county. During the two previous years, money raised at these October teas was contributed to the national fund for training of Chinese nurses, a project undertaken by the BPW during the war period.

Martha McCollum served as tea chairman, assisted by Emma Carter, Gwendolyn Miller, Beulah Elliott, Dena Backes, Ellen Upp, Betty Jones, Suzanne Hamilton, Delphia Hoyt, and Coral Sabo, public affairs chairman who was in charge of arrangements for this week's observance.

Hazel Morrison, president of the Klamath club, presided at the tea table from three until five o'clock, while members of the committee assisted about the rooms.

Radio talks were also broadcast from KFIJ each day, Monday through Friday, and those participating in this part of the program included Isabelle Brixner, Betty Jones, Norma Miller, Hazel Morrison and Dena Backes.

The club has participated in numerous community projects during the past year, such as sponsoring war loans, assisting at the USO, extending financial assistance to Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls, in addition to the main project, helping to raise the $16,000 fund for training Chinese nurses, in which Lucille Tweed's retail selling classes at KUHS assisted by contributing a good-sized sum.

This weekend, several BPW members will attend the southern Oregon conference to be held at Grants Pass, and the second regular meeting of the month is scheduled for Monday, October 15, at 6:30 p. m. at the Willard hotel, with Lorraine Quillen as chairman for a social evening. Those planning to attend are reminded to make reservations by calling Hattie Evans before Monday noon.
