Ister Georges Bidault, who is considered close to De Gaulle, Unofficial computations based on virtually complete figures from metropolitan France showed this lineup in the assembly for the major parties: Socialist coalition, 143 seats, communist 143, MRP 140, moderate rightists 26 and radical socialist 19.

Less than 20 per cent of the remaining assembly seats were distributed among minor parties. The assembly will have 522 members from France and 64 more from the colonies.

Wins Endorsement De Gaulle won electoral endorsement all down the line. Sixteen of his present "council of ministers" sought election to the assembly and 15 were victorious. Only Rene Mayer, his minister of transportation, was defeated.

De Gaulle himself and four other ministers did not seek election to assembly posts. Government statistics indicated that between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000 persons voted in the national elections—the first in which women were eligible.

Rene Pleven, minister of finance and national economy, who is regarded as De Gaulle's "right hand," won election to the assembly by a narrow margin.

Felix Guoin, president of the consultative assembly which has acted as adviser to the De Gaulle government, also won election to the assembly from Marseille. Among the big name casualties was former Premier Edouard Daladier.

THE words of the new Venezuelan president (who for the present is of course more or less a dictator) are fair. He will be judged by his DEEDS, which are yet to come.

IN all this world upheaval, with new governments and new systems taking the place of old ones. Outer Mongolia holds an election and votes practically unanimously for INDEPENDENCE from China. (One city did vote unanimously, casting 24,000-odd votes for the proposal and none against it.)

The dispatches tell us that every voter had to SIGN HIS BALLOT. That does away wholly with ANY idea of free government. If secret police can check on who voted how, elections are only a farce.

Butter May Come Off Ration List

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—Additional ration points may soon come off butter. All rationing of fats and oils may end by January 1—and possibly before.

That was the good news today from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson. Anderson told a senate small business committee that although 100,000,000 pounds of surplus butter soon will be available, butter rationing cannot be stopped immediately.

"The entire fats and oils picture has to be taken as a whole and is not divisible," he said. "If I took butter off the ration list, I would disturb any rationing that existed for fats and oils since one is a substitute for another."

UNDUG CROPS THREATENED BY FIELD FROST

The coldest weather felt this fall in the Klamath basin occurred early Monday morning and a dreaded field frost threatened undug crops, when the mercury dropped to a new low of 26 degrees.

Potatoes set close to the surface of the soil due to May rains, may have been injured by the frost causing extra work of re-grading and some loss, C. A. Henderson, county agent said. No extensive damage to crops from the frost had been reported by growers to the office Monday, he stated.

Work Held Up Rains held up work in the harvest fields Saturday morning but digging was continued in the afternoon when the weather cleared. The frost held work up until about 10 o'clock Monday morning until the sun warmed the ground.

Harvest in this area, figured from reports of growers, dealers, growers' organizations, shippers and storage, seems to indicate that the potato crop was better than 75 per cent in by Saturday night. Quality harvest was in about the same situation, reports indicated.

Third Freeze Damaging Not much damage to crops usually occurs from a first or even a second frost, Henderson said, but if the same freezing conditions persist for three nights in succession, serious damage may be expected.

Jack Frost put the final bite on summer flowers and victory gardens, but root vegetables such as carrots and beets were not injured. These vegetables may be left in the ground, covered with straw and dug as needed.

through the whole thing in a hotel room along with two weeping American mothers and their babies—who were crying, too.

A bomb or grenade dropped from a plane hit the floor above us and exploded," the Saluda, S. C. woman said.

Still trembling and nervous, Mrs. Davis fumbled in her purse—only luggage she was able to salvage in leaving Venezuela—and brought up a battered steel fragment.

"This came through the door of our room. We piled a steel locker against the door and shoved the rest of the furniture against the windows. We spent two days flat on the floor. We had a few pieces of stale bread for food—but we couldn't have eaten it even if it had been good."

Mrs. Davis said at least 20 persons were killed during fighting around the hotel garage.

Clark Brown, Allentown, Pa., business man, said suddenness of the revolt caught Venezuelans an visitor unaware.

"The sound of gunfire was the first indication of revolution," he said. "There had been unrest but the outbreak was not expected so soon."

The first bomb was dropped Friday morning from a formation of ten planes," he recalled. "They appeared to be concentrating on the police station and barracks where government soldiers were entrenched."

Brown and others among the 15 persons who clattered into Miami from LaGuardia said that widespread looting and sacking of homes of prominent persons and liquor and jewelry stores followed the outbreak.

He attributed the pillaging and the deaths of many persons in Caracas to "irresponsibles" who took up arms and roamed the city in the confusion of the revolt.

Brown said estimates of the dead in Venezuela as a result of the revolution "ranged from 2000 to 9000 when we left Sunday morning."

"One man not ten feet away from me was killed by snipers as I came out of the cable office in Caracas Saturday," he added.

Our Home Town

By EARL WHITLOCK Somebody says to you, "Give him my love"—or—"Tell her I thought she looked very lovely"—or—"Say to her that I think her children are delightful"—or—"Everybody spoke about how much better she is looking."

You know what is meant. We have all of us promised to deliver such messages, and then perhaps forgotten to do it. "Soft soap" we have sneered and let the remarks pass unheeded.

And how wrong it is to do that. Those words may mean a lot more than we imagine. When such words are repeated to us, we get a pleasant little warm glow all through our beings. Our mercury goes pleasantly up.

It helps a lot to know that others thought nice things of us—even when we know they are perhaps exaggerating our merits. This is, for the most part a cynical old world and a great many folks think the worst of everyone else as a matter of principle. Pleasant things said about one person by another are too rare to be neglected.

So, if you promise to deliver a message of that sort, don't take the promise lightly. Keep it—and pass the word along.

Next Monday Mr. Whitlock of the Earl Whitlock Funeral Home will comment on Confidence in Crisis.

LIGHT SNOW FALLS AT CRATER LAKE

Light snow fell at Crater Lake national park Sunday night and freezing temperature was felt. The storm made roads hazardous and in some places impassable.

Roads around the crater's rim have been closed to visitors by erection of barricades at the north, east and Annie Springs entrances. The west and south road through the park is still open for through traffic but is icy in spots and careful driving is advised.

Weather at the park is still unsettled, with indications of more storms. If additional snow falls the park will be closed for the winter, park authorities said today.

Dr. Nash Predicts World Order By 1950—Or Else!

anybody by force." He quoted General Eisenhower to the effect that "force can win wars but you can't make peace with a club."

World Order "We've got to produce a world order that Germany and Japan will support because it is to their interest as well as ours," he warned.

In discussing a world federal system, Dr. Nash repeatedly described the circumstances surrounding the formation of the federal system of American states under the American constitution and called the "chaotic anarchy" which prevailed among the former British colonies under the loose federation that preceded the establishment of a government in its final strong central form. He indicated that the American system may well be a pattern for a world order.

Must Have Power World government, he said, must have power to enforce its authority on individuals, just as the federal government may prosecute a citizen of Oregon for violation of federal law without getting permission of the state of Oregon.

Dr. Nash discussed in graphic detail the implications of the atomic bomb and the directed missile. Perfection of a device that will send an explosive missile from any given point in the world to any other given point is not a remote probability—it is a near future reality, he asserted. With that sort of thing hanging over the heads of humanity, what else can it do but take the obvious inevitable step that will assure permanent peace, he asked.

The speaker was billed to talk on the "next 100 years in Asia" but spoke only briefly on that subject. He said that China will continue to be China, doing business at the old stand, for the next 100 years. If there is a third world war, he said, it will start in Asia, probably as an agrarian revolt.

Resentment Against Poverty He said that there is worldwide resentment against poverty. The masses feel, he declared, that destitution of any willing person in the midst of abundance is a crime. "And they are dead right," he added.

Destruction of war, he said, creates a situation ripe for radical agitation, and the only way to meet radical agitation is to clear up the situation that gives it a chance.

The people of Asia, he declared, are through with imperialism. The "trusteeships" written at San Francisco, he said, are just the old mandate system under another name and they won't work. Colonial areas, he suggested, should be given a territorial status in the "federation of the world" much as the American system provides for territories with the prospect of statehood.

"Justice of Empire" "If we try to perpetuate the injustice of empire," he said, "we will end up with a net loss, and succeeding generations of our young men will wade through a sea of their own blood to accomplish nothing."

"We are shoring up the tottering empires. Unless we get out from under, we will share in the hatreds of oppressed peoples."

The speaker pointed to the rebellion now occurring in Dutch East Indies, and said that this had always been regarded as one of the best-governed colonial situations.

"All of which shows that the best of that sort of thing is not good enough," he remarked.

Dr. Nash's speech brought prolonged applause from the Knife and Fork audience, and nearly an hour was spent in questions and answers. The speaker was introduced by Paul Skeen.

Forrestal Opposes Placing Army-Navy Under One Head

and navy with the chairman of a proposed national security resources board as fourth member.

The president of the United States would preside as commander-in-chief.

As Secretary Forrestal began his testimony he stepped forward to shake hands with Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D-Cole), acting chairman of the senate group and strong advocate of the army-navy merger plan.

"I suppose it's customary for opponents to shake hands," the secretary said with a laugh.

No Holds Barred "From now on no holds are barred," the senator replied with a smile.

Backers of the merger count on President Truman's throwing his weight behind the idea. Two legislators who recalled that Mr. Truman was enthusiastic for the merger when he served in the senate.

Forrestal told the committee those who favor a merger have overlooked the need for close relationship of diplomatic matters under the state department and plans for national defense. He called this an "erroneous approach to a fragment of the intricate and complex problems that confront us."

No Need For Haste He said there was no need for undue haste on postwar defense plans and repeated several times that he favors unified leadership in the field. He added that this could be obtained by continuing present organizations and implementing them.

The navy secretary said his plans also would involve: 1. Continuation of the wartime joint chiefs of staff composed of top leaders of army, air and sea forces.

2. Creation of a military munitions board to set policy on procurement and logistics.

3. Establishment of the new national security resource board to keep active all plans for industrial and civilian mobilization.

4. Creation of a central intelligence agency.

Hitting directly at the merger proposal, Forrestal said it would: 1. Concentrate too much power in one secretary.

2. Handicap congress' attempt to learn necessary details for legislation and appropriations.

3. Not bring "efficiency or economy."

4. Eliminate present "healthy competition."

Under such a plan, Secretary Forrestal said, the navy would not have been able to wage its effective Pacific campaign while the army and other leaders were concentrating upon Europe.

inal veniremen were excused from the box when they told O'Neill and the court they were well acquainted with McPherrin and had formed prior opinions regarding the case. Two others were ruled out by Humble's peremptory privilege.

The jurors selected were James J. Thompson, A. F. Glover, Melvin Newby, M. G. King, Kenneth Klahn, Wallace Uerlings, Eugene H. Larsen, Allen Sloan, John R. Hamlin, Estlin Kiger, R. E. Thompson and William Beck.

Lake o' the Woods resort crew was busy Sunday taking in boats and putting things in storage for the winter. One of the new cabins has been completed now for occupancy by George Bosley, caretaker.

Tom Neely and Jack Dutcher, resort managers, and their families, will probably be moving out in the next 10 days.

Several summer home people were at the lake over the weekend burning brush on lots, clearing for planned spring construction. Burning conditions are satisfactory now, John Sarginson, district ranger, advised, and those planning to burn in the area may obtain permits at room 217, federal building, Klamath Falls.

Road work is continuing in Lake o' the Woods area this week and the crew will move later to the area north of Fort Klamath.

Glass Workers In Ten Cities Start Walkout

(D-La.) suggested the legislators postpone all labor bills and let the contenders "shake down" into their postwar relationships.

Miners Return The miners' return ended at least temporarily a dispute centering around recognition of a foremen's union. Protracted conferences under department of labor AEGIS failed but the strike, which began Sept. 21, ended abruptly with the Lewis order last week.

Steel production, hard hit by the fuel shortage, began to swing upward as coal moved toward the furnaces again. Yet a week was expected to elapse before the laid off workers could be recalled in full strength.

One of the largest new threats against labor peace came with the announcement by a spokesman for the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic, and Silica Sand Workers that unionists would leave their jobs today. He said a breakdown in contract negotiations was the immediate cause.

Lewis McCracken, federation secretary and treasurer, said he knew "of no last minute meetings," and said the strike would hit the following cities: Toledo and Mt. Vernon, O.; Ford City and Creighton, Pa.; Clarksburg and Charleston, W. Va.; Ottawa, Ill.; Crystal City, Mo.; Henrietta, Okla.; and Shreveport, La. Companies involved are the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., and the Libbey-Owens-Ford Co.

Demand Wage Increase

The CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union injected another dissident note with its demand for a cost of living wage increase for 30,000 members on the west coast.

An interim increase of 25 cents an hour and 37 1/2 cents an hour overtime also was sought pending new contract negotiations.

The strike of AFL ship repairmen, which began Oct. 12 in a dispute over application of a 11.8 per cent increase awarded ship repairers above rates paid for new ship construction, was settled. But Al Laster, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Metal Trades Council said "the men will get the 11.6 per cent increase but it must be approved" by the war labor board.
