

Quisling Pays Final Penalty For Selling Out Own Country

By NED NORDNESS

OSLO, Oct. 24 (AP)—Vidkun Quisling, Norway's arch traitor, was executed by a firing squad before dawn today, paying the final price for dealing with an enemy his king and countrymen defied throughout the bitter years of the war.

The greatest secrecy surrounded the execution, a foreign affairs office spokesman said. Quisling was awakened in his cell at about 2 a. m. (5 p. m., Tuesday, PST) and rushed quickly before the firing squad of ten Norwegian military police. The only witnesses were an unidentified member of the state prosecution, a clergyman and the officer who gave the order to fire.

The youths who formed the firing squad had been forced to flee the country during Quisling's puppet regime. Members of the squad had been alerted for the past week for their task.

Quisling stumbled to his death through a murky, drizzling rain in the dismal execution square of the ancient Akershus fortress. To the very end he maintained that he was a patriot. He had sent a letter protesting his innocence to King Haakon VII.

The government had not planned to announce the execution for three or four days to avoid publicity and public curiosity. However, one Oslo morning newspaper learned of Quisling's death in time to catch its last edition with a brief sentence that he was executed. The story brought forth a ministry of justice communiqué some seven hours later.

The body presumably will be turned over to relatives for burial in Quisling's native province of Telemark. A foreign affairs spokesman intimated that his brain would be removed for study.
