

Labor Leaders Acclaim Truman's Wage Policy

By The Associated Press
Labor leaders today hailed President Truman's wage-policy address as a "light of hope" for workers and as setting "a plain and simple course for us to follow," while industry leaders generally were non-committal and congressional comment divided mostly along partisan lines.

The president in his speech last night approved generally reasonable wage increases to avoid deflation and unemployment, but of price increases only where necessary. He said industry generally could stand some pay increases out of profits but warned labor against making too great demands on employers.

Said Victory A. Olander, Chicago, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Federation of Labor: "The speech will be very helpful in solving strikes."

No Comment
The National Association of Manufacturers in New York and C. E. Wilson, Detroit, president of General Motors, said they had no comment on the speech. Typical of the position of most industrial leaders was that of Henry Kaiser, San Francisco, who declared:

"I consider it a serious subject which I want to study thoroughly before making any statements."

R. J. Thomas, Detroit, president of CIO United Automobile Workers union, said:

"He removed the last excuse of the automobile companies to refuse our proposed 30 per cent payroll increase when he offered relief on prices after a reasonable period of production at ceiling levels if fair profit cannot be earned."

Paul Shoup, president of the Los Angeles Merchants and Manufacturers association:

"Factual and individual application is necessary to make adequate comment."

Statements Sound

Dave Beck Seattle, vice president of the AFL Teamsters union: "The president emphasized collective bargaining and over the long run his statements were very sound."

House Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts: "It was a very powerful, logical, sound, fighting message."

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio): "The new so-called wage-price policy can only discourage business expansion and kill increased employment but ultimately it can only mean increased prices and inflation."

N. B. Ford, executive vice president of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut:

"If both management and labor will translate his recommendations for mutual cooperation into sincere efforts at conformance, I have every confidence that national productivity upon which all purchasing power is based can be skyrocketed to an all time record."

Harvey W. Brown, president of the AFL International Association of Machinists, said in New York that "our president's suggested policy with respect to wages is a big step contributing to needed consumers' buying power to keep stagnation out of business."

SIDE GLANCES

"It'll be a mistake, mother, to put off our wedding till spring! Last night he told me it's funny how many girls smile at him, and he isn't going to go on thinking it's because of his discharge button!"
