

BARUCH WARNS OF DANGER OF WORLD WAR III

He added the nation's scientific policy should foster freedom of inquiry and aim at "the widest, most efficient spread of scientific information, both of as yet undisclosed war discoveries and future findings."

Baruch recommended that a proposed national science foundation should consist of a group of scientists "selected solely for the contributions they can make to the advancement of science."

Full Responsibility He suggested they have full responsibility for deciding on the program of research under an executive director or general manager, appointed by the president "on the nomination of the science board with senate confirmation."

He said the foundation should concentrate on: (1) Developing new weapons for national defense; (2) Intensifying the war against disease, both physical and mental; (3) Offsetting the depletion of natural resources.

"Unless we continue to support active research in all fields," he said, "those countries who do will not only overtake us but even outstrip us."

widespread fighting continued in north China and was particularly fierce in Shansi province. He declared nationalist forces were engaged in a pincer drive from the north and south designed to squeeze communists out of their holdings on the Tientsin-Pukow railroad and thus open a free passage to Chungking for Chiang's government forces.

The spokesman said local militarists—communist-organized partisans drawn from among country folk—were supporting communists, using such crude weapons as wooden cannon, long swords, obsolete rifles and homemade mines and grenades.

Personally, the spokesman commented, he was "not very happy" over the statement of Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, American military commander in China, that his mission of removing Japanese from China inadvertently supported the nationalist government.

Other Chinese communists expressed open dissatisfaction over the U. S. role in China.

dependents, salary $1,800 a year, tax under old law $39, none under new. Married man, no dependents, $7,000 income, $1555 tax under old law, $1292 under new. Single person, $2500 salary, $480 old law, $380 new. Persons with incomes less than $5000 can read their tax liability directly off tables which will be prepared and sent out by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

More Complicated Those who have to figure their tax will find the going more complicated. First, the 3 per cent normal tax is put on the same exemption basis as the graduated surtax ($500 apiece for the taxpayer and each dependent).

GATHWRIGHT FOUND INNOCENT BY JURY

so the ownership of the sacks is still a matter of speculation. Judge David R. Vandenberg ordered them held by the county clerk for 60 days, pending a settlement.

If the man known as "Smokey" is apprehended and charged with the theft, the sacks would be retained as evidence against him.

Jurors Retire

M. P. Lavenik was foreman of the jury which acquitted Gathwright. The jurors retired to decide the case at 4:35 yesterday afternoon, and a few minutes later were ready to come back into the courtroom.

They were held up until after 5 o'clock by a divorce case the judge was hearing.

In his closing argument to the jury, Defense Attorney U. S. Baler, intimated the state's contention that the sacks Gathwright had in his possession were the same sacks stolen from Long, arguing that Gathwright had bought his bales at Merrill the first Saturday in November and state's witnesses had not noticed Long's sacks missing from the warehouse until later that day.

District Attorney Clarence A. Humble attempted to prove Gathwright had knowledge they were stolen by the price he paid for the sacks, the below-market-value price he sold them for, his hauling them a long distance across the county for storage and the place he stored them—the Short-Cheyne warehouse—where stolen goods would not likely be expected.

Mac Endorses Service Merger

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1 (AP)—A suggestion by General Douglas MacArthur that the army, navy and air forces be consolidated into a single fighting agency with one uniform was made public today.

MacArthur's views were obtained by a special army-navy committee which contacted army, navy and marine leaders in connection with proposals for postwar defense forces, and were made public by the senate military committee.

"The experiences of this war have completely and absolutely convinced me that there should be a complete amalgamation of the various fighting forces," MacArthur said. "I believe they should wear the same uniform. I believe there should be one family instead of three."

INDONESIANS ATTACK THIN BRITISH LINE

"discussions were of an orientating nature."

Soekarno argued for recognition of an Indonesian de facto government, and the Dutch pleaded for cooperation as serving the best interests of all concerned in the service said.

After the conference Soekarno was reported en route to Jogjakarta in central Java, to organize members of fighting youth movements there to cease hostilities.

Lt. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, was host for the meeting and its chief architect. It seemed clear that Britain was anxious to show the world she could be scrupulously fair in arbitrating such differences, and wanted to solve the crisis in order to raise her prestige in the east.

In a broadcast appeal to the Indonesians last night, Soekarno told the Indonesians to lay down their arms and "solve all misunderstandings in close cooperation with the allies."

"There is no reason for us to take up arms against the allied forces," Soekarno said. "They come only to disarm and evacuate the Japanese and further to take care of internees and to maintain law and order in allied occupation areas."

His broadcast followed the talks between Soekarno's unrecognized cabinet and two Dutch government officials.

Present were acting Governor General Hubertus van Mook and Dr. Charles O. Van Der Plas, adviser to the allied command on Dutch affairs, representing the Dutch; and Soekarno, his Vice President, Mohamed Hatta, and his Foreign Minister, Soebardjo.

THERE are still vague intimations from Washington that in the big diplomatic dicker that is supposed to be under way with Stalin we are not coming along too badly.

As to that, time will tell, and we can only wait and see.

MEANWHILE a new world disturbance crops up in Palestine, where blood flows today (in limited amounts) in Arab-Jew clashes.

The trouble in Palestine arises out of the fact that there are still in Europe more Jews than Europe seems able to digest, and another scheme has been proposed to take them out of Europe and put them off by themselves in Palestine, permitting them to establish there a Jewish state of their own.

The Arabs, who are heavily interested in Palestine and have a large population there, are balking at this solution, as they have done in the past, and this more or less perennial boil on the Middle East neck is again coming to a head.

WE are continually reminded that with world conditions as touchy as they are and are likely to REMAIN for some time, the wise thing for us to do is to keep our own house as neatly in order as we can.
