JOB AVAILABLE AT USES OFFICE HERE

A quiet day was reported Tuesday at the United States employment office, with the first snowstorm of the season keeping would-be job hunters indoors.

Positions are available through the office in a variety of activities, Jack Almeter, manager, stated, and while there is a constant turnover in employment, many of the persons registered are not fitted for particular positions.

There is a present demand for trained stenographers in local businesses, Almeter said, and an unusual dearth of those trained in shorthand and speed-writing. This is probably due, he said, to the fact that those who would ordinarily have taken business training, have been engaged in war production for the last few years.

Aldermer advises young people just graduating from schools and colleges to take up business training, and become efficient in taking shorthand or speed-writing dictation. Good men stenographers, typists and bookkeepers are especially in demand, he said, and those with shorthand training can be placed without delay.

Persons with training or experience in any business who are not now employed, are urged to register with the employment office immediately.

Suit Charges Patent Infringement

PORTLAND, Nov. 6 (AP)—A federal suit charging patent infringement was on file here today against Lee Eyerly, Salem manufacturer of carnival and resort rides.

Clifford F. Kennedy, Los Angeles, charged Eyerly's firm with infringing on certain amusement patents since June, 1942. He asks an injunction and a settlement for profits and damages.
