brought surrender of the Japanese, and Admiral Marc Mitscher had credited navy carrier-based airplanes with winning the Pacific air war.

Said the former eighth air force commander:

"Admiral Nimitz and Admiral Mitscher are great commanders, but this war was won by teamwork."

"Each of the three agencies did its best. No single agency alone was responsible."

"I do feel very strongly it was not seapower that compelled Japan to sue for peace. And that it was not carrier strength that won the air war."

"Our B-29 boys are resting uneasily in their graves as a result of those two comments."

Forrestal said in his letter to Patterson:

"Hypocrisy"

"Gen. Doolittle also referred to arguments advanced by witnesses before the committee as 'hypocrisy.' As civilian head of the naval service I should not let charges against high ranking naval officers of hypocrisy or partisanship to the point of callousness go unnoticed."

"But to avoid adding to the undesirable heat which it seems to me has already entered these deliberations, I refrain from making any direct reply. Moreover, the navy airsea rescue record speaks for itself of our concern for the B-29 crews."

"I question whether we should allow the discussion of a proposal on which our departments are divided to lead us into impugning the good faith of people who disagree with us, and I question especially whether death in any particular line of duty—and the resultant grief at home—should be appealed to in order to advance any individual point of view."

Both mother and sons were reported doing nicely and the little two-pounder was in fine shape. Siltman is in the service, hospital attendants said.

General Lends Helping Hand

FORT BENNING, Ga., Nov. 10 (AP)—Cpl. George W. Schultz of Pompton Lake, N. J., was detected.

He'd used up his battery trying to start his car.

Car after jeep, jeep after jeep, truck after truck—but no one heeded his plea for a push.

He gave up, decided to wait for a wrecker from the post exchange.

"Oh, well," he sighed, and began flagging the motorists again.

The first car along the superhighway stopped.

Flustered, Cpl. Schultz saluted.

The occupant of the car was Brig. Gen. Ogden J. Ross, of Troy, N. Y., stationed here.

Gen. Ross promptly aligned his car behind the corporal's and got it started.

So when Cpl. Schultz arrived at the pro's office, a half hour late, he asked:

"Can a corporal write a letter of commendation to a general?"

Anyway, he did.

Gen. Ross is en route to his native Troy to act as grand marshal in Troy's Armistice Day parade Monday.

hope for better days. I'm trying to instigate in my people courage to face the future and now I believe there is some revival of our spirits from utter despair."

Shidehara was ambassador to Washington in the early 1930s and then gained fame as foreign minister in a series of liberal cabinets.

His secretary disclosed today that the premier conferred for an hour yesterday with General MacArthur. What the two discussed "must come from MacArthur," the secretary added.

It was the second such meeting since Shidehara took office.

BRITISH OPEN FIRE ON NAVY BASE AT JAVA

fighting is control of the rich Netherlands East Indies with a population of 41,000,000. Indonesians. The native nationalists are seeking freedom from Dutch colonial control.

Open Attack

Lt. Gen. Sir Phillip Christison, allied commander in the islands, announced the opening of the British attack. The British troops jumped off from positions which they held around the city in the face of light sniping and machinegun fire.

Soeardjo said the telephone exchange had been abandoned.

The telephone building probably was vacated by the nationalists after the strafing and bombing attack by British planes. The British report said shelling was directed against "Indonesian strong points."

The British did not specify the extent of the Soerabaja area occupied during the "slow advance," but Indonesian sources said the British had moved through two suburbs.

Soeardjo said that the nationalist cabinet had given Dr. Soerio, Indonesian republican governor of Soerabaja, full authority for decisions at the naval base since he was better able to judge the local situation and the feeling of the natives.

A British command statement said that British troops still had to collect 20,000 Japanese soldiers and sailors in the Soerabaja area.

Atomic Talks Might Shape World Future

Russia and what to do about the Palestine Jewish problem.

But President Truman has said his purpose is to talk about atomic problems and Atlee indicated as much in a speech delivered before he left England yesterday.

"Banish Fear"

At a lord mayor's luncheon Atlee said he hoped to achieve a world "safe for the common man" and to banish fear of the atomic bomb.

The days of the two prime ministers will be crowded. Tonight both Atlee and MacKenzie King will be entertained at state dinner at the White House.

Tomorrow, before embarking on the yacht, they will pay an Armistice Day visit to the tomb of the unknown soldier and the nearby grave of Sir John Dill, former British military representative here, at Arlington National cemetery.

No terminal date for the conference has been announced, but some diplomats familiar with the preparations said it might last about five days.

Mr. Truman has called for outlawing the atomic bomb. Atlee has spoken more specifically of the possibility of working through the United Nations to achieve control of it.

Our Home Town

Armistice Day—1945
By EARL WHITLOCK

Somehow, this year, there doesn't seem to be such great reason for celebrating Armistice Day. Such a big war—so much bigger than the one that ended in November a generation ago, has so recently ended victoriously.

And we kidded a good deal about the ideals for which we fought that older war. "To make the world free for democracy," they told us. And the "Self-determination of small nations." And afterwards, we looked at results and said, "Oh, yeah?"

But there was no real cause for cynicism. World War I laid the basic foundation—perhaps only one stone in the foundation of that ideal structure of a "Free World." This war, just ended, may be the finish of the building or it may be just another course of masonry, depending on how wisely we use the advantages we have gained.

So really what we commemorate today is the bloody and successful birth of an idea—which is a very important thing—just as important as the birth of any individual in the history of the nation. Don't minimize Armistice Day merely because more recent victories have temporarily overshadowed it.

Newsprint Lack Gets Attention

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Senators Butler (R-Meb.) and Willis (R-Ind.) called today for an immediate congressional investigation of the newsprint situation.

In a joint statement the two republicans said legislators should look into reports that the production of American paper mills already is 6000 tons less than the estimated rate for the fourth quarter of this year.

As a result, they said, the office of price administration is considering lifting ceilings $5 per ton, an action they said would cost newsprint consumers about $16,000,000 a year.

Butler and Willis authorized a resolution for an investigation of the shortage.

The senators said it may be necessary to develop new sources of supply in Alaska, as well as to sour the industry in this country.

U. S. General Says Yanks Nonpartisan

ican intervention even as the navy department in Washington was emphasizing the marines are not in China "for any purpose connected with the conflict" between reds and nationalists.

A communist spokesman alleged, without confirmation, that an American ultimatum was served last Monday on red troops to withdraw 100 kilometers from either side of the Peiping-Mukden railroad. The spokesman said the red commander at Shanhaikwan, coastal terminus of the great wall, turned it down—and nothing in the way of fighting has been reported since.

In Washington, the navy department statement noted that marines under Lt. Gen. C. Wedemeyer's operational control are stationed along the Peiping-Tientsin-Chinwangtao line of communication and at Tsingtao.

The statement added the marines were there "for the purpose, and the purpose only, of assisting the Chinese national government to obtain the surrender of Japanese forces there and to carry out the surrender terms in accordance with international agreement."
