the report as expressing the belief that information on the movement of American ships had been obtained by a Japanese-American stationed aboard the Jap Admiral's flagship to decode commercial broadcasts.

The witness said one Japanese who was interviewed related that if it was reported on the radio that the German attack had lost one dog, it might have meant that an American carrier had left the harbor.

Ingils emphasized that American officials in Honolulu said they had failed to substantiate that there had been any plan to use commercial broadcasts.

In fact, Ingils said it would have been unnecessary, since the Japanese consul there could communicate direct with Tokyo by uncensored commercial cable before the attack.

Decisive Sea Battle
Japanese naval leaders planned to seek an immediate, decisive sea battle with the American fleet if the raid on Pearl Harbor failed, congressional investigators were told today.

Hear Admiral T. B. Ingils presented to the senate-house Pearl Harbor inquiry committee a navy report on the Japanese plans which said Tokyo's war lords conceived the December 7, 1941 attack in the first part of January, 1941, trained for it in the summer, and ordered it in effect December 2.

In testimony yesterday, Ingils had said the United States Pacific fleet was numerically inferior to the Japanese in December, 1941. Thus it might have faced defeat had the Japanese brought it to battle.

The report was based on translations of captured documents, questioning of prisoners of war, and questionnaires which Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur submitted to former members of the Japanese naval high command after the occupation.

NATIONALISTS OPEN MANCHURIA GATEWAY

Communist bandits out of Shanhaikwan have taken the city, said Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander of the nationalist forces assigned to take over Manchuria after withdrawal of Russian troops.

He predicted the occupation of Shanhaikwan, at the Gulf of Chihli end of the Great Wall, would make it unnecessary to attempt any amphibious operations along the coast of Manchuria. Shanhaikwan is about 10 miles north of Chinwangtao, where U. S. marines are guarding the railway southward to Tientsin.

General Tu said the nationalists were principally concerned with reopening the Tientsin-Mukden railway, and would insist the Chinese communists withdraw at least 50 kilometers (about 32 miles) from the rail line.

Tu said Shanhaikwan was taken without heavy fighting, and casualties on both sides were light.

peals yesterday to Dr. Soerjo, native governor of Soerabaja, and other leaders who fled the British advance to return and inspire Indonesian troops. Earlier appeals were broadcast to the natives for troop reinforcements, promising that tanks and artillery were on the way from Jogjakarta, nationalist stronghold in the heart of the island.

British tanks were active yesterday against extremist troops and there were a number of sharp artillery exchanges, but the Indonesians suddenly from areas where previously they had put up stiff resistance. A British command summary said Indian troops expended carefully the British-controlled area, mopping up as they advanced.

COMMUNITY FUND DRIVE AT IMPASSE

The Klamath county 1945 Community Fund drive was at a standstill today with only $41,000 of the $75,000 quota reached.

The drive which should have been completed in October, was partially delayed because of strikes in the county, it was observed. This situation no longer exists and residents of the county are urged to send in their donations without delay.

Program plans for 1946 are being held up by organizations benefiting from the fund.

At a meeting of Community Fund chairmen Friday afternoon, further activities were planned to complete the drive as quickly as possible.

W. E. Lamm, chairman, suggested a re-cavass of the town to be sure no one had been missed in the first survey. It was decided to redouble efforts in the rural districts to give everyone a chance to contribute to the fund.

COMMITTEE TALKS FAIRGROUND PLANS

Plans for improving fairground facilities for shows, fairs and exhibits were discussed today by the Klamath County chamber of commerce agricultural committee.

Chairman Lee Holliday will appoint a committee to plan a program for developments to make the fairgrounds suitable for all types of exhibits and shows. This will include remodeling of present facilities and construction of new ones to insure the safety of crowds and exhibitors and adequately accommodate them.

An effective program for extending advertising of Klamath basin potatoes was also discussed at the meeting. Carl Dehlinger, president of the Klamath Potato Growers association, agreed to appoint a committee from his group to meet with the chamber group to work out an advertising program.

truthful in part of her testimony.

In his closing statement to the jury Kimmell stated that a not guilty verdict would be a tacit admission that the jurors would not mind seeing Heuvel "re-appointed chief of police next week." He maintained that corroboration of Bernice's story was not necessary because witnesses to sex crimes are rarely ever available and that she did not come into court willingly to tell her story but under subpoena.

Jury Retires
After Judge Walker's instructions, the jury retired to deliberate at 3:18 p. m. Bernard took two exceptions to the judge's instructions, which would probably have been used as a basis for an appeal had a guilty verdict been returned. Heuvel was indicted for this
