Truman could be impeached. They thought him responsible for the current condition, on this ground.

His former economic stabilizer was quoted as saying before the strike wave started, that wages could be increased 50 per cent without a price increase...

Could Be Impeached

MY answer to these inquiries was that Mr. Truman could be impeached—but will not be. The constitution does not prescribe impeachment for mistakes...

But some democratic politicians, below the Washington plane, are beginning to speak of creation of a new party. They want to break away from CIO-PAC control over the party...

If anything happens along this line, it will be the other way around. The state laws and organization arrangements are such that it is practically impossible to start a new party in this country...

Against Union Control

AT present, a majority of democrats in congress are holding out against union control but unable to effectuate any affirmative legislative action. If they asserted leadership they could hold the political activities of the unions within their grasp...

What has happened in the last few weeks is that the unions have displayed their development of the strike weapon to atomic proportions. By strikes against food, fuel and public service, they have shown a power of destruction of life as thorough as the atomic bomb...

The World Today

HEREFORD, Germany, Feb. 21—When you get a close view of the rehabilitation and the democratization of Germany under allied supervision, you wonder whether on the whole this task doesn't present even greater problems than the smashing of the mighty Hitlerian military machine...

Here in the British zone, we find the problem being attacked along two main lines. One has as its objective the raising of the standard of living to the level laid down by allied agreement—a long term job. The other is the re-education of the German people...

The administration bears the hall-mark of Field Marshal Montgomery, who only recently relinquished supervision here to become chief of the imperial general staff.

Not Coddling Germans

IT is noticeable that there is not coddling of the Germans. The toughest spot in the vital educational program is the group of people between the ages of 14 and about 35, for they are the Hitlerized element. The older folk are less of a problem, and of course it is upon the children that lasting peace largely must be built.

So the British are setting up democratic institutions. These include universities and schools. The creation of trade unions on craft basis is being encouraged and while there will be federation among them, they will retain their sovereignty.

New text books are being provided throughout the zone. The old arithmetic books instead of presenting problems in the form of how many apples are two and three, substituted SS soldiers, or maybe tanks, for apples.

Peace Theme Broadcasts

THE British are doing daily broadcasts with a peace theme to the schools. The radio also is telling the students about their countries. There are over two million children in the schools of the British zone but they are short of teachers.

More than incidentally, the scholars are given midday meals with calories daily beyond the normal ration, of 1550, with added calories for heavy workers.

Another important phase of the democratization is the fostering of youth movements, and there are now some 1800 youth clubs with a membership of about 75,000.

These are social clubs, run by a committee of their members.

ALBANY, Feb. 21 (AP)—Jobs are being found for veterans here at almost the same rate as their discharge, U. S. Employment Service Office Manager Lynn S. Black reported today.

He said the office listed 1500 unemployed during January—500 of them women—but noted a shortage of skilled workers in the area. He predicted spring weather will open new jobs and resumption of logging will absorb many others.

GUM-CHEWING PROBLEM

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor) — If you have any inside information on gum, would you kindly pass it on to your readers. Have you noticed what the scarcity of gum has done to the gum chewing public? When they finally get hold of a piece of gum, they are so overcome with enthusiasm, that I believe there is some danger of a dislocated jaw in a large number of cases. Then too, they are using up needless energy in a futile cause. But my particular "gripe" in this situation is for those of us who must look on—and it isn't because I have no gum.

Yours, For greater finesse in gum chewing.

Hoyt Assumes New Duties

DENVER, Feb. 21 (AP)—Edwin Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Portland Oregonian for the past eight years and one-time director of the domestic division of the office of war information, today assumed his new duties as editor and publisher of the Denver Post.

He succeeds W. C. Shepherd, veteran executive associated with the Post for almost 40 years, who remains in an advisory capacity.

Post Printing and Publishing company stockholders at their annual meeting today elected Hoyt to the board of directors with Helen S. Bonfils and E. Ray Campbell. The directors then chose Campbell, attorney who represents the interests of the estate of H. H. Tammen, former co-owner of the Post with F. G. Bonfils, as president of the company.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marshall

Bird's-Eye View of America

A fellow took an aerial photograph of our town, and it makes the place look like Utopia.

Folks argued that the new brew-house would never look well beside the old Town Hall. But they harmonize perfectly from the air. One side of the railroad tracks looks as good as the other. All the different landmarks blend in nicely with surroundings.

From where I sit, there's a lesson in that photograph. A community's made up of different elements—people as well as landmarks. Some vote one way, some another, and enjoy a glass of beer and other don't. You might think there's a lot of reason for friction.

But it's all in your point of view. Get up high enough—see the community as a whole—and those little discords blend together into what we call America—a free, harmonious land. The differences only big to people who see them too close!

Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

PROVISION of educational benefits is the most important thing, right now, that can be done for the men and women who served in the armed forces in World War II.

There is an urgency about the veteran education problem that needs to be fully recognized by the public, and those officials and agencies which have the responsibility of providing these benefits, and veterans themselves.

That urgency lies in the danger that large numbers of young veterans, if unable for any reason now to take advantage of educational opportunities, will never do so.

The strong probabilities are that these young people will get into earning activities and otherwise will become established in a way of life from which they will not turn again to seeking an education.

We have known personally a good many young people who were good college material, and who intended to go to college, but decided to work a year or two before taking that step. Most of these people never went to college.

That is exactly what is likely to happen with most veterans who for any reason put off their educational plans now. They will lose out on the most important practical benefit that is offered them by a grateful public.

Must Have Facilities

NOW, there was prompt legislative action to provide veteran educational benefits, both by the nation and the state of Oregon.

Those steps were taken in recognition of the vital importance of education to the young people coming out of the service, and we have heard a number of veterans say that the educational feature is the most valuable thing in the GI bill of rights.

The legislation, however, is not enough in itself. There must be facilities for educating the veterans who want to take advantage of the opportunities offered them under the law.

We have been told that already there are applications on file from hundreds of veterans at state higher educational institutions which are unable at this time to hold out early hope of taking them in. That pressure from education-seeking veterans is going to mount steadily, for a time, but so long as the institutions are unable to do anything for these veterans, they will inevitably mean the loss of educational urge and opportunity for many of them.

Oregon is right now facing a critical situation with respect to veterans' education, and it is encouraging that there are evidences that the governor and state educational authorities are recognizing the need for immediate action in providing the needed facilities for this purpose.

If something isn't done now, it will be too late to provide this highly important benefit for thousands of young men and women who deserve at least that much from the state and country they served in the war.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—An outside man who knows as much as anyone of the unions is telling his friends:

"When the strike debacle of this nation is over, there will be only one union. It will be the AFL, and it will be under control of John L. Lewis."

This objective prophet assumes existing leadership is getting beyond its depth. He thinks inept and wild directorship is weakening the setup of the unions, causing shrinkage of coffers, loss of power and disaffection within. Mr. Lewis, original CIO organizer, importer of the sit-down strike technique, rich mine union chieftain, now returned to the executive council of AFL, has a large respect in the rank and file on all union sides, where he is rather generally conceded to be the smartest man in the union movement.

Whether one big union under Lewis would furnish any improvement is not the decisive point of the matter. Certainly one union would present greater power than the now divided house. Furthermore, Lewis has established, in his career, a national respect as a trustworthy man. He might be able to establish union responsibility. The personality of any man with leadership powers can be a greater influence than legislation.

Call For Change

BUT the call for a change must arise, not from these circumstances, but from the union membership, if it is to be effective. Developments at hand will determine the satisfaction or dissatisfaction of the men with the current course of events.

The development of the striking power to atomic proportions has inspired excited inner suggestions, meanwhile.

Two separate persons have asked me if Mr.

Campus Beer Sales Talked

PORTLAND, Feb. 21 (AP)—The state liquor control commission plans to ask University of Oregon officials to take opinion on beer sales adjacent to the campus before acting on the College Side Inn's renewed license appeal.

The attorney for the owners yesterday told the commission university deans had said they would rather have the students drinking their beer next to the pumps where they could control them, than drinking in Eugene and suburban taverns.

Owners of the inn, James F. Broby and John Schaefer, reported they paid $11,000 for the inn, located next to the campus, last September and that the tavern had been selling beer since prohibition was repealed. The commission refused the tavern a 1946 license on a ruling December 17.
