War Widows Said Slighted

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 22 (AP)—Widows and dependents of men killed in the war are being neglected while labor unions and government workers get pay increases, the national commander of the disabled American veterans asserted here.

Dow V. Walker, Newport, declared in an interview that the bereaved relatives receive only a small pension, but purchasing power is steadily declining. He called the totally disabled veteran with a family a "forgotten man," who gets $115 a month and "can't live on that amount of money . . . our organization is asking that additional dependency benefits be granted, as they are in Canada."

Walker defended Gen. Omar Bradley, criticized by the national American Legion commander, and said he "is doing a bang-up job."

The Congressional Record, official publication of the U. S. congress, once was named the Congressional Globe.
