Employment Gains In Klamath Basin

The turning point in the employment situation in Klamath basin has just about been reached, Jack Almeter, manager of the USES stated today. Unemployment claims are noticeably showing a drop and employment is slowly picking up. Registration of returning veterans reached the peak about December and January and is now showing a slight decrease, Almeter said.

The load of unemployed still remains about static, he said, but if the good weather continues the situation will gradually adjust itself.

(Q) When does a vehicle have the right of way over a pedestrian?
(A) When pedestrian is jay-walking or when a pedestrian is proceeding contrary to direction of a police officer or signal device.

Anglers Land Hefty Trout

Restless sportsmen in the area are keeping in shape these slow between-season days by pulling the rainbow trout out of Upper Klamath lake and are getting some big fish, too.

The "little" ones average about a pound and a half, fishermen report, and the Fremont bridge is a favorite spot for bait fishing. Some diehards, however, use boats for trolling and report luck with using large double-bladed flashers.

Snow is expected to be off the Klamath river banks below Keno soon and fishermen are looking forward to trying this area. Parties now go up the lake as far as Modoc Point and Eagle Ridge. Some mullet fishing is being done at Barkley springs.

Midland Woman Hurt In Wreck

Mrs. John W. Mistler, 22, Midland, was slightly injured at noon yesterday when the automobile she was driving was struck by a car driven by W. W. Shepherd, Bremerton, Wash., on U. S. 97 at the Modoc street intersection.

John W. Mistler, reporting the accident, said that his wife was in the act of turning off the highway onto Modoc when Shepherd's vehicle, coming up from the rear, crashed into the right side of the Mistler car.

Apparently Shepherd had failed to note Mrs. Mistler's signal for a right turn and was trying to pass on the right hand side as she started to turn. The report estimated Shepherd's rate of speed at 55 miles per hour.

Roads Repaired By Grading Crews

Grading crews have been at work on roads into the Lava Beds national monument in preparation of the coming heavy tourist season. The monument is open to visitors all year and last Sunday several private cars as well as conducted tours of visitors from the WRA camp visited the park.

Several of the caves were visited and some of the parties ate their picnic lunches in the caves.

11 Klamath Men Drafted

Klamath county's next draft induction call, set for March 20, will bring 11 young men just reaching the age of 18 years into the army.

Board number 1 has filled its quota of four with enlistees, including James Allen Little, William Earl Swinney, Kelly Farris and Everett Jess Atkins.

For board number 2 James E. Wampler and Maxie Prentice Jr. have enlisted and Virgil T. VanSchoiack, Fred L. Rueck, Harley A. Johnson, Harold W. Muncie and Samuel Dean Wright have been called.

The group will meet at the Southern Pacific depot at 7:30 a. m. March 20 for transportation to the reception center at Fort Lewis, Wash.

No fathers, regardless of age or previous draft status are now being called by the local board. James R. Fowler has recently taken the place on board number 2 vacated by the resignation of Fred H. Heilbronner.

Extension Unit News

Leather gloves may be cleaned so they will stay soft and pliable, advises Mrs. Winifred K. Gillen, Klamath county home demonstration agent, addressing homemakers who find the care of these articles a problem. Dry cleaning solvent should be used, and the work should be done out of doors.

The most efficacious method, says Mrs. Gillen, is to place the solvent in a quart jar, shave two tablespoonsful of paraffin into the solvent—the same kind of paraffin used in preserving. The jar of solvent containing the paraffin should then be set in a pan of hot water (she stresses the necessity of doing the entire process out of doors as a safety feature), and when the paraffin has dissolved, place the gloves in the solvent-paraffin mixture and let them stand for a few minutes. Shake them about in the jar, or if the gloves are quite soiled, rub the soiled spots with a soft brush. Rinse the gloves thoroughly in more of the paraffin mixture. Then roll them in a towel to absorb excess solvent and spread them out to dry.

As a final finish, Mrs. Gillen recommends rubbing the gloves together when they have dried, to soften them, and then rubbing them with a soft cloth to give them the original patina.

Home—Mr. and Mrs. Franklin J. Michaelson returned Wednesday from a 10-day stay in Los Angeles where they spent their honeymoon.
